How They Vote
Still F. D. Roosevelt
Dr. Eckener, A Real Man
Wasted Mail Advertising

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

YOU KNOW all about the election today. There was active voting, displaying an interest in politics not usual except in presidential years.

In the country men make a ceremony of voting. They even dress up for it, and stand around before and after voting, looking wise.

In the city they hurry. In New York, where this happens to be written, reporters say voters were unusually numerous among the prosperous class, or those that were prosperous before 1929. This, in the estimation of reporters, means Republican votes, because "all that rich people get out of the new era is heavier income tax."

Nevertheless, the voting as a whole, seems to indicate heavy Democratic voting.

The Republican party, stunned by an election in which it carried six states out of forty-eight, and stunned more severely by the sight of somebody actually trying to do something, has lacked courage, energy and resourcefulness to prepare sound arguments in its own favor.

By the way, you remember not long ago wise ones were saying, "Of course, F. D. Roosevelt will always have to live in the shadow of his great cousin, Theodore. Theodore will always be THE Roosevelt."

F. D. seems not to be overshadowed just at present.

The President voted at Hyde Park, answering "still Franklin D. Roosevelt," to the question, "Name, please?" from Miss Sarah Baylis, town clerk.

He seemed cheerful and not at all doubtful as to how the thirty-five million Americans will vote, on the average. He will probably thank, by radio, the millions whose votes express confidence in him.

Dr. Hugo Eckener, who has flown six hundred thousand miles in his Zeppelins and about four hundred thousand more miles teaching young pilots, is in New York.

It is a pleasure to see such a powerful person, well past sixty, planning a new line through the air between the United States and Europe, "coast to coast in forty-eight hours." He, of course, would run the ships on the first few trips himself.

Occasionally you see a big man who looks like a big man. Bismarck, as he walked up the hill from his little inn at Gastein to talk to the two old dummy-emperors, William and Francis Joseph, was a great German who looked great.

Dr. Eckener's head, coming forward on his shoulders, reminds you of the head of an old bison. You imagine that the great Baron Von Und Zu Stein must have had such a look.

President Roosevelt likes to do things that have not been done before. It is safe to say that he will encourage the plan for a regular passenger, mail and express air line between this country and Europe, especially as this would mean building dirigibles here in the United States, at a profit.

That there is profit in such a line is proved by Dr. Eckener's line between Germany and Brazil.

The United States-Europe line would be five times as prosperous.

U. S. Traps Suspect in June Robles Kidnaping

DANCE HALL PROPRIETOR IS HELD

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 7—The Department of Justice today announced that its agents had taken into custody Oscar H. Robson (Buster) upon authorization of the United States attorney of Phoenix, Ariz., as the kidnaper of six-year-old June Robles.

The department said that a federal complaint is being filed charging Robson with the sending of extortion letters through the United States mails.

Robson, a 31-year-old resident of Tucson, Ariz., was identified by the various handwriting experts who declared that the handwriting in the extortion letters, which called for payment of $15,000, was his.

For several years he has been connected with a dance hall in Tucson.

The Robles child was kidnaped by an unidentified man about 3 p. m. April 25 while she was going home from school.

Later the same afternoon a small Mexican boy gave her father a written demand for the $15,000 in five, ten and twenty-dollar bills.

RANSOM OUTLINED

The boy who delivered the note said he had been given 25 cents by a man he did not know to deliver it.

The initial ransom demand was roughly printed in lead pencil bearing the signature "XYZ" and contained specific directions for delivery of the money.

No further word was heard from the kidnapers until April 29 when a second letter was dispatched from Tucson to the girl's father repeating the demand.

Robles then addressed through the newspapers a request to the kidnapers that they submit proof his child was still living. Robles expressed willingness to comply with all their demands.

THIRD NOTE RECEIVED

Early in the morning of May 6 the third note, similarly signed "XYZ" reached the uncle of the kidnaped child. This note said the child was in good health, and again demanded delivery of the money.

On the afternoon of May 14, June was found by her uncle and her father's attorney and returned alive to her home.

The girl was located through information in a letter from Chicago signed "XYZ" and addressed to the Governor of Arizona.

She was found in the desert about nine miles east of Tucson chained in a specially constructed wire cage, buried about two feet under the ground with a small opening in the top of the cage to let in light and air.

Pope Pius Greets Hungary Premier

Vatican City, Nov. 7 (AP)—Pope Pius received Premier Julius Goemboes of Hungary in audience today. The Premier was to meet Premier Benito Mussolini for a final conversation before leaving for Budapest tonight.

In diplomatic circles of Rome it was said the two premiers had entered into the very heart of the Central European question.

'Yes, I'd Know the Bad Man'

Morro Fire Blame Is Put Up to Line

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 7—Death of 84 passengers and 30 members of the crew of the Morro Castle steamship disaster was attributed today by the Steamboat Inspection Service to rapid spread of the fire, delay in giving the fire alarm, failure to mark exits properly and delay of the officers in sending the SOS message.

Dickerson N. Hoover, in charge of inspection service, reported to Secretary Roper that the fire which destroyed the ship off the Jersey coast could have originated either in the locker in the writing room or in a hold and could have spread from either place. He asserted that there was no evidence of incendiarism, but it was impossible to state the exact cause.

The origin of the fire is a mystery that might never be solved, Hoover said.

Hoover expressed hope that new light might be thrown on the possible origin of the fire through the trial of five officers of the ship now under way before a board of steamship inspectors of New York and by the criminal investigation by the district attorney.

The report, 117 pages long, recommended more extensive use of fire resistance material in building ships, greater care of steamship inspectors and formation of an organization in Washington to see to it that all laws pertaining to the construction of ships are carried out.

DEMOCRATS CLINCH ALL CONGRESS

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Washington, Nov. 7 (INS)—Smashing through Republican barriers that have been impregnable for more than half a century, Franklin D. Roosevelt and his New Deal policies rolled up today the greatest political triumph that has been recorded in an off year since the Civil War.

Pennsylvania went Democratic. That fact alone tells the story of Tuesday's balloting. For when Pennsylvania fell there fell the citadel of Republicanism and those political precepts which have dominated the American government, with few exceptions, for 60 years.

Not even the first Roosevelt (T. R.) in his hey-day, plus Woodrow Wilson and the famous schism of 1912, could accomplish what the New Deal accomplished yesterday.

The result:

The Democrats picked up 10 seats in the Senate, increasing their total to 70, or four more than two-thirds. Neither party has ever approached those figures.

In the face of all precedent, the Riding the surge of the Curley "Work and Wages" and New Deal wave, the entire Democratic state ticket appeared today to have won handily as tabulation of 1693 precincts out of the total of 1716 in Massachusetts was completed.

Only Joseph Santosuosso, Democratic candidate for the office of secretary of state, was trailing, but the unreported precincts were in cities and towns where it was believed he would be given sufficient votes to place him ahead.

Meanwhile, in the congressional fights, the Democrats had pried two Republican congressmen loose from their seats, including Congressman Robert Luce of the ninth district, who had practically a mortgage on the berth but who was defeated by Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge.

Luce had been a congressman for 15 years and Foss

SKETCHES ILLUSTRATING THE LIFE STORY OF THE GOVERNOR-ELECT ARE BY BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN STAFF ARTIST CHARLES SCHMIDT

GOVERNOR-ELECT CURLEY RADIOS GRATITUDE

Governor-elect James M. Curley made a resolution to spend election night at his Jamaicaway home, but he broke it to broadcast a victory message to Massachusetts from the radio rooms of the Boston Evening American.

Accompanied by his daughter Mary, his sons, Paul and Leo, and a band of close friends and supporters, the Bay State's governor-elect made his way to Winthrop square between ranks of a police escort.

Few knew of his coming, but when the newsboys, reporters, printers and pressmen around the Boston Evening American building saw the Curley car, they burst into cheers of welcome.

Governor-elect Curley made his way through the building to the microphone room. There he sent out, by remote control, over Station WBZ-WBZA his message:

"Friends, I want to express my sincere and heartfelt appreciation to the countless thousands who voluntarily served me in this campaign.

"I cannot over-emphasize the part played by Mr. William Randolph Hearst and his chain of newspapers in Massachusetts, the Boston Evening American, the Daily Record and the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

"They served me well in their presentation of the issues of the campaign.

"Those issues were clear. They may best be expressed by the single phrase 'Work and Wages.'

"I have considered that it would be possible to unite all the elements in the Commonwealth in favor of my candidacy —not because it was my candidacy, but because of what we stand for.

"Massachusetts has always been a leader in what was best for the Commonwealth and best for humanity.

"In getting behind President Roosevelt, we may support him in his endeavor to take the worker off the welfare rolls and to place him on the pay rolls.

"I enter office under happy auspices, in the knowledge that I have made no pledge, no promises, other than that to the people of the Commonwealth: That no man, woman or child shall go hungry or cold while I am in office. I thank you."

The governor-elect turned smilingly towards the group that packed every inch of the broadcasting quarters, and then Newcomb F. Thompson, "N. F. T." of the Boston Evening American, introduced to the radio world the next First Lady of the Commonwealth, Miss Mary Curley.

If it were possible, Miss Curley was even happier than her triumphant father. Maybe it was because she showed it more. Her voice shook with emotion as she said into the microphone:

"I am very happy tonight. I am proud of the finest father in the world!"

Few words. But what a tribute!

Paul and Leo Curley, sons of the governor-elect, followed their sister in broadcasting. Paul said:

"I have the feeling that it is because justice has been done that dad was enabled to come through a winner."

And Leo, adding that he could only re-echo his brother's sentiments, declared:

"It was a great victory for a great man."

As the light signaled that the broadcasting period was ended for the moment, the studio rooms resounded with more cheers. Photographers invaded the rooms. Flashbulbs popped and flared.

In the joyful excited group that had come with the governor-elect and was now with him in the pictures were Eugene M. McSweeney, his close personal friend, former fire commissioner and one-time circulation manager of the Boston Evening American.

Also Professor Frank M. Simpson of B. U. Law School, Professor Robert E. Rogers of M. I. T., columnist and news analyst for the Boston Evening American. Both of these professors supported Mr. Curley during the campaign in public addresses and broadcasts.

Edmund L. Dolan, the Curley re-lime city treasurer, was there; so were Dr. Martin English, the Curley personal physician for years, and former Mayor William E. Weeks of Everett, former Republican who was one of the staunchest supporters and workers during the campaign.

As Governor-elect and his party left the radio rooms they were overwhelmed with supporters and admirers all eager to offer congratulations to Mr. Curley.

'I Thank You, Massachusetts'

NEWCOMB F. THOMPSON MARY CURLEY GOVERNOR-ELECT CURLEY

Massachusetts' next governor, James M. Curley, former mayor of Boston, lost no time after his election was assured in thanking the voters of Massachusetts who so loyally supported him in his campaign and gave him such a handsome majority over his Republican opponent, Gaspar G. Bacon. Governor-elect Curley broadcast his thanks and his pledge of efforts for the good of all over the remote control station of WBZ in the office of the Boston Evening American, the station from which the American kept radio listeners in touch with election results. His daughter, Mary, Newcomb F. Thompson, radio editor of the American, and other backers accompanied Curley. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

Truth Won for Father, Says Mary Curley

"Truth won."

It is Mary Curley speaking of nothing else but the glorious victory at the polls that transformed the James Michael Curley home out Jamaicaway into a governor's mansion last night.

Standing by his side, Mary Curley, the future first lady of the state, seconded her father's sentiments and managed to be interviewed at the same time. She repeated, earnestly:

"Truth won. All the power of wealth and leadership combined against father, but he spoke the truth and the people recognized it.

"I believe in truth beyond anything. That's why I never had the vaguest doubt of father's victory. And it is wonderful that he achieved it himself, unaided.

"I am proud and thrilled."

Asked if she approached her impending impressive duties, as the state's official hostess, with hesitancy or alarm, Mary Curley tossed back her head, in a challenging gesture, and said she guessed there wouldn't be much change between being the first lady of Division and the first lady of Massachusetts.

She was looking very slim and attractive in a black wool, satin-trimmed, tunic dress fashionably high-necked, a silver-fox cape, a black antelope, close-fitting hat and black suede slippers. A square jewelled pin at her throat, a sapphire and diamond bracelet and a diamond-encrusted onyx ring were her jewels.

Had her taste of active electioneering in the present campaign developed in her any urge for a political life of her own?

TELLS WOMAN'S PLACE

Well, hardly. She believed a woman should be intelligently informed on political matters—that, definitely, women are an influence or an inspiration to their menfolk. But, as for political jobs, she thinks women should leave them for the men.

CURLEY TIRED, PLANS REST

By FRANK REILLY

Amid all the tumult and the cheering within and without the Curley home in the Jamaicaway early today, the man who had won the governorship was trying to decide where he would take a vacation.

Triumphant he was, but tired. Weeks of campaigning and hours of greeting his supporters and admirers left him weary in body, albeit just as keen as ever in mind.

One thing that he was trying to think about was that needed and deserved rest. First plans had it that Governor-Elect Curley would go to White Sulphur Springs in Virginia.

But Mr. Curley had a better idea. He thought he might go to Puerto Rico.

Governor-Elect Curley mentioned Puerto Rico with a reminiscing smile. He was "the delegate from Puerto Rico" at the national Democratic convention that nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for the Presidency of the United States.

That was the time, in 1932, that the opposition was congratulating itself that "Curley was all through" because his state for the convention lost out in Massachusetts.

Sinclair Hints Recall Fight After Defeat

By Associated Press

San Francisco, Nov. 7—Far behind the ballot count of Acting Governor Frank F. Merriam (R.) in the race for the governorship, Upton Sinclair, Socialist-turned-Democrat, today threatened to launch a new campaign to "end poverty in California."

Refusing to concede defeat formally, Sinclair congratuled his opponents for their "brief victory" and declared "this election has just been a skirmish and our people have enlisted for the war.

Merriam was leading by 132,000 votes, with 7107 precincts out of 10,721 counted.

Merriam's running mate, George J. Hatfield, who apparently won the lieutenant-governorship over Sheridan Downey, Democrat, declared "radicalism has been defeated."

HINTS PRESIDENT TALK

Sinclair retorted "tens of thousands of workers all over the state" would watch keenly to see "whether Merriam would keep his promises about the old age pension and the 30-hour week."

Sinclair gave the first hint of his recent discussion with President Roosevelt by declaring the chief executive had promised to broadcast to the nation "on the principle of production for use," a major tenet of the "EPIC" plan, as opposed to production for profit.

The former Socialist also charged that votes had been "stolen" and his campaign managers added they were not satisfied with the reports about the returns. They expressed the belief that large numbers of ballots had not been counted and therefore they would not make any formal admission conceeding the election to Merriam.

CARRIES LOS ANGELES

"Remember that we have the power of recall in this state and if a Republican reactionary becomes governor of this state we will have that recall power hanging as a sword over his head," Sinclair said.

Merriam carried Los Angeles, regarded as a Sinclair stronghold by a large majority, and also was ahead in 57 of the state's 38 counties.

A political "honer" which Sinclair said could be blamed for his defeat was recalled.

"If I am defeated in the race for governor," Sinclair said while on a campaign tour, "it will be because of a political 'boner' or blunder that I made.

"I made a statement that if I was elected tens of thousands of unemployed would flock to California."

"I smiled when I made the statement in the presence of Relief Administrator Harry L. Hopkins, and I thought it would be taken in that light.

"The statement was distorted to make me say that half a million unemployed would flock to California."

G. O. P. Gains One Seat in Kentucky

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 7 (AP)—A Republican gain of one seat in Congress in the Kentucky delegation appeared certain on scattered returns collected after the state's count got under way today.

The Ninth District, traditionally Republican, appeared about to send John M. Robison, Barbourville (R.), to Congress.

THEY'RE PLENTY KEEN, THESE BEAUTIES AND THE SWORDS THEY USE IN FLORIDA

"We mean business," say these girls at Miami, Fla., as they practice lunges and parries with the foils on Miami's Tahiti beach. The girls claim fencing develops grace, poise, perfection of figure and the girlish art of self-defense. Whether the business they mean is to attract or repel suitors, the girls refuse to say. Hollywood may be great on girl pictures but how about Miami—not doing so bad, heh! (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

I'll Die If I Lose Baby, Mrs. Vanderbilt Cries

Mother Ill, Worn by Long Trial

'I SEE OTHERS HOLD THEIR CHILDREN, MY HEART BREAKS,' SAYS YOUNG MATRON

By DOROTHY ROE

Universal Service Staff Correspondent

New York, Nov. 7—"It will kill me if they don't give me back my baby."

Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt, ill and worn because of her six-weeks' court battle for custody of her 10-year-old heiress daughter, Gloria, spoke these words with quiet conviction here as she rested at home, a trained nurse in attendance, waiting to resume the fight before Supreme Court Justice John F. Carew today.

Letters Face Test

Meantime a bitter dispute over certain phrases in the letters of little Gloria Vanderbilt to Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney was to come to a head today at resumption of hearings.

Phrases under question are contained in notes in which the 10-year-old heiress allegedly told of the unhappiness of her migratory life with her mother.

Mrs. Vanderbilt contends the letters have been tampered with, and it is expected that Dr. Elbridge W. Stein, handwriting expert, will take the stand today to bear out this charge.

It was disclosed that Mrs. Laura Kilpatrick Morgan, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt, who testified against her daughter, had been subpoenaed by Nathan Burkan, the latter's attorney, to re-appear on the witness stand.

She will be asked under oath whether she wishes to change her original testimony.

Burkan, it was disclosed, has received word that Mrs. Morgan has confided to friends that she wished to modify portions of her testimony.

Mrs. Morgan has been considered one of the most important witnesses heard and part of the testimony she gave concerned linking the name of Mrs. Vanderbilt with that of Prince Gottfried Hohenlohe.

Illness and fatigue forced Mrs. Vanderbilt to spend the day in bed, but she is determined to be up to face the ordeal that awaits her today, when Elbridge W. Stein, handwriting expert, will attack the genuineness of five letters said to have been written by little Gloria.

Tears In Eyes

Her voice breaking at times, her dark eyes bright with tears, she went on:

"It is so simple. I am Gloria's mother. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney is her aunt. I think that ought to settle the issue."

But the strong claim of motherhood has not yet restored to Mrs. Vanderbilt her little daughter, now at the home of her wealthy aunt.

ALICE Still to Be QUEEN

THOUGH HOUSE IS FOR SALE

T. R.'S DAUGHTER REIGNED IN OLD CAPITAL HOME

By Universal Service

Washington, Nov. 7—When Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth sells the attractive home in Massachusetts avenue in which she and the late speaker of the House spent their last years, it will not mean the retirement of the talented daughter of President Theodore Roosevelt from the Washington scene, it was learned here.

The beautiful house she has now offered for sale was not the scene of her most brilliant triumphs as Washington's premier hostess and the nation's most influential lady politician. That distinction belongs to her former home in M street, which she occupied with her husband for more than a decade before he became speaker of the House.

When they occupied the M street house, "T. R." had left the presidency, but he was a frequent visitor there, notably when he came to Washington in 1917 to put a blazing brand under the inertia of wartime preparations. The Longworth home became the rendezvous of every ardent patriot in Washington.

Later, when Woodrow Wilson brought back to America the Treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations, it was in Mrs. Longworth's M street salon that a little group of senators, headed by Henry Cabot Lodge, gathered to plan the defeat of the instrument which proposed to entangle America in foreign complications and alliances.

The Longworths moved from M street to Massachusetts avenue in 1925 following arrival of their daughter, Paulina Roosevelt Longworth.

Now Mrs. Longworth intends to get rid of the Massachusetts avenue place, and is shopping, she told friends, for "some little place with a garden."

Star Injured

JOHNNY SILENT ON WIFE'S HURTS

By Universal Service

London, Nov. 7—One of Lupe Velez's dark eyes was two or three shades darker today. The fiery Mexican film star also had a split lip.

But how, when, or where she obtained the injuries is "nobody's business," according to Johnny (Tarzan) Weismuller, her husband.

This was also the attitude adopted at the Twickenham film studio, where the frolicksome Miss Velez is working on her first British film, "The Morals of Marcus."

The shiner and split lip were, however, enough to force Lupe into seclusion. Production of the film will be held up a week while she recovers, officially, from "a very bad cold."

Gun Blast! School Room In Panic

BOY SOUGHT FOR SPRAYING SHOT OVER PUPILS

Beverly, Nov. 7—More than 20 boy and girl students in Beverly high were thrown into a panic today when a charge of buckshot was fired through a window, spraying the classroom.

The shot is alleged to have been fired by one of the boy students in the class, listed as absent today, as an aftermath of a grudge fight with another student yesterday.

School and police officials announced after a preliminary investigation that the youth apparently fired at his combatant of yesterday as he sat over his class books.

The youth, according to several pupils who observed him, approached a school class window, took aim with a long double barreled shot gun and fired.

GIRLS' 'SMOKER' FAILS

B. U. Co-eds Shun Puffs at Lunch

It looks as if a great experiment has failed.

Anyhow, two weeks ago the student government of the Boston University college of practical arts and letters decided to allow smoking in the school cafeteria for a two-week trial period in order to boost the business of the lunch room.

The two weeks are up. But, according to G. L. Zervis, cafeteria manager, business instead of increasing has decreased. So the students are in a dilemma. The student board will have to decide the issue within a few days.

Dean T. Lawrence Davis has decided to let the girls handle the case by themselves. He has intimated, however, that the cafeteria might not reopen next fall, since it has been a liability.

Spain and New York to Merge in Royal Wedding

DAUGHTER OF FORMER KING ALFONSO TO WED PRINCE

By International News Service

Rome, Nov. 7—Royal romance, culminating in the engagement of Don Alessandro Torlonia, son of Mrs. Elsie Moore Torlonia, social registerite of Park avenue, New York, and the Infante Beatriz, 25-year-old daughter of former King Alfonso of Spain, was officially announced today.

Alfonso, who frowned upon the marriage of his heir to a Cuban noblewoman, and the reported betrothal of another son to a British noblewoman, gave his consent to the marriage of his eldest daughter to Don Alessandro, who ranks as Prince of Civitella Ceal.

Divorse of Mrs. Torlonia, daughter of Charles A. Moore, wealthy New York hardware man, from Duke Marino Torlonia in Connecticut six years ago, was an international sensation. They were married in 1907 and separated in 1925. The Duke has since died.

Don Alessandro owns a magnificent palace here.

It is not anticipated that the wedding will take place for some time.

MACHADO DYING IN POISON PLOT

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 7—The Hera'd-Tribune says Latin-American quarters in New York have received "private information" that Gerardo Machado, fugitive former President of Cuba, is near death from poisoning in Santa Domingo.

General Machado, the newspaper says, was reported to have been poisoned by his cook Monday night.

"The cook, who had posed as a Dominican," the newspaper added, "was said to be a Cuban who had been assigned by a secret group to take Machado's life."

Officials in Santo Domingo have denied recurrent rumors of Machado's presence there. The former president fled Cuba after his regime was overthrown.

KANE MYSTERY GIRL FOUND

The mysterious "Joan," sought by police in connection with the alleged murder of Hugh Kane by his wife, Anna, is a 21-year-old Hazelton, Pa., girl of Polish extraction, who came to this city in answer to letters she received by subscribing to a Bridgeport, Ct., correspondence school.

This information was obtained today exclusively by the Boston Evening American.

Police are directing their efforts toward locating the girl after Miss Mildred Yore, 26, of Belmont street, Belmont, was questioned by Lieutenant Louis DiSesa of the homicide squad. Miss Yore was formerly cigarette girl in the restaurant where Kane and his wife worked. She told police she had left the Kane home shortly before the shooting occurred.

PARIS ARMING IN CABINET CRISIS

By Associated Press

Paris, Nov. 7—President Lebrun cast about today for a new premier to lead uneasy France, for the shattered political truce government of Gaston Doumergue was scheduled to die tomorrow.

The aged Doumergue, former president who came from retirement to form a government after fatal street riots last February, is expected to give Lebrun the resignations of the entire cabinet.

Burly Edouard Herriot, one of the six Radical-Socialist ministers who broke with Doumergue over his program for increased power and constitutional reform, probably will be called on by the President to head the government.

HERRIOT TO ACCEPT

He was expected to accept and keep the present ministerial lineup almost intact. Falling him, Pierre Laval, like Herriot a former premier and a member of the Doumergue cabinet, was mentioned as a likely designate.

The troubled days of February were recalled as authorities took elaborate precautions to nip in the bud any attempts at outbreaks in the streets.

All available mobile guards and gendarmes were brought into the city.

VETS WARN CABINET

Colonel de La Rocque, leader of 200,000 war veterans banded together in the Croix de Feu (Cross of Fire) organization, gave a "solemn warning" to the cabinet that its attitude today and tomorrow will "give hope of organised peace or lead first to civil war, then to a foreign war."

Doumergue will be free to quit the political arena forever, through the decision of the six Radical Socialists.

competing with honest, long-sufferings newspapers and their advertising profits.

He naks, by implication, how can the press be free, if you take away its money.

That worry is unnecessary. The advertiser who tries to advertise by mail throws money out of the window and soon finds it out. And advertisers are intelligent.

A concrete instance. Suppose you planned to prepare five million "Dear Mr. Jones" advertisements, fold them neatly, put them in five million different envelopes and address them to five million different readers.

First, you couldn't find five million addresses, and half of them would be wrong if you did find them.

Also more than four of the five millions would look at the little mail advertisement and throw it in the waste basket unread.

If you put only a one cent stamp on each foolish advertisement sent by mail, you would have to pay fifty thousand dollars for the five million stamps.

It would cost another cent for mailing, for envelopes, for addressing, etc., a one-hundred thousand dollars for five million advertisements, of which more than four millions would be completely wasted and the remaining million of little value.

On the other hand, advertising in the intelligent way, you can put a full, large-sized newspaper page of color advertising in "The American Weekly," mentioned because it happens to have the biggest circulation in the world, more than five million.

For this advertisement, purchased at ten cents a copy by more than five million American families, seen and read by all of them, the total cost to the advertiser would be $16,000, as against $100,000, the cost of an advertisement sent to 4,000,000 waste baskets.

Dr. Lahy, of the New England Hospital, says the much discussed experiment of transplanting in men the glands of monkeys is a failure. However, partial transplanting of the parathyroid gland, from one human being to another, has proved successful, opening up great possibilities.

Failure of monkey gland transplantation is not bad news. There is enough of the monkey in man up to sixty years of age to make any monkey gland transplanting at that age seem unnecessary. Somebody said, long ago, that man is one-third man, one-third monkey, one-third hog. That is a little severe, but the monkey part is sufficiently accurate.

Learn from Dr. Klopp, who knows, that if you eat irregularly, drink liquor and live under a nervous strain, as men do that gamble in stocks, you may expect stomach ulcers.

A stock market crash may cause an ulcer to return after being "cured" for years.

Napoleon Bonaparte lived under a strain, and on St. Helena suffered acutely from ulcers of the stomach.

Hauptmann Is Quizzed Over Names

Copyright 1934, by Universal Service

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 7—Bruno Richard Hauptmann, accused of the murder of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., infant son of America's most famous flier, may have named his own baby after Baron Von Richthofen, Germany's leading war aviator.

Attorney-General David T. Wilentz, searching for a possible envy-hate motive, was considering the fact that Hauptmann's baby, born a year after the other child's death, was given the first name of Von Richthofen—Manfred.

While Mrs. Hauptmann says the name was selected because it was "pretty," Hauptmann told friends, police say, that the baby was named after the war ace, who brought down 50-odd Allied pilots. The prisoner, who fought through the World War as a machine-gunner, later to become a humble Bronx carpenter, once told a friend:

"My son will some day be as famous as his 'Godfather.'"

Hauptmann spent election day without voting, as he has spent other election days since he entered the United States illegally, for as an alien he has no franchise.

Lindbergh Inquiry Extends to Newport

Newport, R. I., Nov. 7—The investigation into the kidnaping of Charles A. Lindbergh, Jr., in connection with the trial of Richard Bruno Hauptmann, reached here today when a lumber expert and a New Jersey state trooper began checking a lumber shipment.

Although neither man would identify himself, both admitted that they will attempt to trace part of a shipment which came from a New Jersey lumber yard to J. T. O'Connell Company here in February, 1932.

MOORE GIVES UP IN 'KING' DEATH

John Moore of Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, the last of five men wanted in connection with the murder of Charles "King" Solomon, Boston's late night club king, surrendered to police today.

The first thing Moore said was that he had never left Boston.

The fugitive's surrender to Lieutenant John J. McArdle of Station 15, Charlestown, came without any preliminary negotiations. Shortly after 9 a. m. today a woman called the officer on the telephone.

"If you will stand outside the First National Bank in City square, Charlestown, at 9:30," she said, "you will see something interesting and important."

And she refused to say another word. McArdle took his service revolver and went to the front of the bank. At 9:35 Moore walked up to him and McArdle took him to police headquarters.

Requests for Bedding Reach Swap Editor

Readers, have you conducted a thorough search of your closets and attics? You undoubtedly have many things which have performed their services to you but which to more needy would prove a veritable gift from the gods.

Requests for bed clothes were repeatedly made in today's mail. One mother informs us that four members of her family have to sleep in the same bed for lack of sheets.

Baby's blankets are needed by the same party.

Two girls of 20 and 12 wearing size 18 and 14 coats respectively cannot attend church services because they are without coats.

The mother of these two girls needs a coat size 42.

A girl of thirteen writes in that she is in want of a winter coat. She has brothers and sisters, ages from 5 to 11 who would appreciate clothing of any sort.

The youngster says her mother has not had a winter coat for five years and is never able to go out during the winter months.

A Jamaica Plain resident asks for a parlor stove.

An East Boston woman will swap a front room stove and an odd bureau for a good three burner gas stove.

She has daughters of 8, 6 and 4 who need clothing.

With such urgent requests made known the Swap Editor knows no further persuasion is needed for each reader to conduct an inventory in his family.

CURLEY RUNS UP 107,604 LEAD IN SMASHING VICTORY

WALSH MARGIN IS 250,000 IN SENATORIAL BATTLE

By BERNARD DOHERTY

for the past decade and each was practically conceded re-election in past ballotings.

The other congressional upset was in the third district, where Joseph E. Casey, Democrat, of Clinton, defeated the incumbent, Frank H. Foss, of Fitchburg.

With only 23 of the state's 1716 precincts missing, the figures gave former Mayor James M. Curley 729,891 votes as against 622,287 for Lieutenant-Governor Gaspar G. Bacon and 93,686 for Frank A. Goodwin—a Curley plurality of 107,604.

At the same point in the tabulating, United States Senator David I. Walsh was leading Robert M. Washburn by 534,635 to 350,328—a Walsh plurality of 304,310.

With 1683 precincts counted, Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook was leading Santosuosso by 675,728 to 668,978. In the battle for other offices, however, the Democratic candidates were ahead.

Mayor Hurley of Fall River led John W. Haigis of Greenfield by 578,613 to 530,886 in the fight for lieutenant-governor.

BUCKLEY IN LEAD

State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley (D) led Oscar G. Dieter (R), 757,533 to 580,279 in the race for treasurer.

Thomas H. Buckley (D) was ahead of former state Auditor Alonzo B. Cook in the auditor race by 716,912 to 691,142.

State Representative Paul A. Dever, the surprise candidate of the election, was out in front of Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner (R) by 691,076 to 652,473.

The victory of Curley places Massachusetts before the nation squarely behind President Roosevelt and his recovery program.

In Boston, the complete vote gave Curley a plurality of 96,175 votes over Bacon. Curley received 173,363 votes, Bacon 77,187, Goodwin, 8531.

Walsh carried the Hub over Robert M. Washburn by a plurality of ernor, had 332,277 votes to 293,330 for Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, his Democratic opponent.

The same precincts gave Secretary of State Frederic W. Cook, Republican, 830,426 to but 271,177 for Dr. Joseph Santosuosso, his Democratic contestor, placing Santosuosso's position in an unfavorable light.

DEVER TRAILING

Another contest where the Democratic aspirant was running behind was for the attorney general-ship, where the present attorney general, Joseph L. Warner of Taunton, Republican, had 317,071 votes to 280,376 for Representative Paul A. Dever of Cambridge, Democratic aspirant.

The Democrats had apparently gained an additional congressman in Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge.

Russell was running ahead of Congressman Robert Luce of Waltham, veteran legislator, an unyielding opponent of repeal of the prohibition act.

Russell had the personal support of James Roosevelt, son of the President, in this contest.

The Republicans succeeded in retaining the balance of their strength in the national House, the remaining nine out of 16 seats being re-elected.

In the latter delegation, however, appears a new face, as Congressman-elect John D. Higgins of Boston (West End), won the Democratic primary nomination from Congressman John J. Douglass of East Boston.

THREE UNCONTESTED

Higgins, Congress A. Pinti Andrew of the sixth district, and George Holden Tinkham of the tenth, had no contests.

The Democratic vote piled up by Walsh was surprising because of an apparent lack of enthusiasm for him in many Democratic rallies throughout the state.

His tremendous vote in Boston showed that the Democrats had refrained from any attempt to cut him as an aftermath of the primary campaign.

In the Republican towns, also Robert M. Washburn, his Republican opponent, was badly cut by voters of his party.

Former Mayor Curley made a fine showing in his native city, and in his vote in the state at large showed amazing strength, although in some of the western sections he bucked the support which Governor Ely, native son, showed in the election two years ago.

GOODWIN CUTS VOTE

Frank A. Goodwin, Independent candidate for Governor, cut into Bacon's vote heavily in sections like Brockton and New Bedford but Curley would have defeated Bacon even with Goodwin out of the contest.

Bacon managers had expected a 121,000, The result was, Walsh 180,785; Washburn, 59,156.

In the presidential election two years ago, Governor Ely carried Boston by 182,967 votes over the late Lieutenant Governor William S. Youngman.

While the total Boston vote was a disappointment to those expecting an all time high because of the record primary registration of better than 318,000, it did surpass other off-year contests.

LEADS IN CAMBRIDGE

Cambridge gave Curley a lead of 10,422 votes over Bacon, while Walsh topped Washburn by 163,671. The Curley vote here was: Curley 22,896; Bacon 12,474. Goodwin received 1271 votes. Walsh got a total of 24,153, to Washburn's 10,482.

In the great flood of Democratic votes, Treasurer Charles F. Hurley was returned a big winner for a third term.

Deputy State Auditor Thomas H. Buckley of Abington was elected as state auditor by a wide margin over Alonzo B. Cook, Republican, who was attempting a comeback.

Cook, until his defeat by a Democrat four years ago, was auditor for 18 years. He was cut badly by the rank and file of his own party.

Out of a total of 730 precincts out of 1716 in the state, Haigis, Republican, for lieutenant governor, was leading Paul A. Dever, Democrat, by 530,886 to 578,613.

Dever, however, was running ahead of Attorney-General Joseph E. Warner (R) by 691,076 to 652,473.

MEXICANS ASK PRIEST DEATHS

By International News Service

Mexico City, Nov. 7.—Execution of all Roman Catholic priests in Mexico at the hands of a firing squad was formally urged in an appeal to the Mexican Chamber of Deputies today in a petition sent by a radical group of professors in the Federal school for the proletariat at Matamoros, in the State of Tamaulipas.

ALL 14 COUNTIES FOR RACING

Returns today indicated that the voters of every one of the 14 Massachusetts counties have approved horse race betting under the parimutuel system.

And all except one county, Dukes, has approved dog racing, unless late figures also put Norfolk county on record against the canines.

In most counties the vote was not even close. Apparently the people of Massachusetts are overwhelmingly in favor of racing as exemplified by Rockingham and Narragansett.

Boston voted for horse betting by 125,440 to 42,857; dogs, 123,844 to 61,486.

66 G. O. P. SENATE SEATS GO; MORE IN HOUSE

By Associated Press.

A conquering New Deal, brushing challengers aside, continued its victorious away today as late returns were tallied.

Democrats themselves were almost breathless as they contemplated the extent of their triumphs.

"Pennsylvania Democratic! Need more be said?" was their summary.

A total of 70 senatorships for their party out of 96 seats remained a possibility, and they enjoyed a net gain of seven House memberships.

Republican woes included six definite losses in the Senate and four more indicated.

STATES IN SWEEP

The states definitely taken over by Democratic candidates for senatorships: New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland, Missouri, Ohio and Rhode Island.

The states where Democrats led: Republican Pennsylvania, with the "invincible" Reed evidently vanquished by Guffey; as well as Maryland, New Mexico and West Virginia.

Counting for the House of Representatives was much slower. When the Democrats passed 218, the majority mark, on the way to what they blithely insisted would again be "more than two-thirds," Republicans had a scant 35 seats.

Here is how the overturns balanced up:

	Republican gains	Democratic gains
Massachusetts	—	2
Maine	1	1
New York	1	1
Michigan	2	—
California	1	—
Oregon	1	—
Nebraska	1	—
Kansas	1	—
Pennsylvania	—	5
Illinois	—	3
Iowa	—	1
Connecticut	—	2
Net	7

Austin of Vermont was the only Republican Senatorial candidate definitely listed as a winner, but Vandenberg still led in Michigan and Townsend in Delaware. Frazier, Republican Independent, who supported the New Deal, led in North Dakota.

KANSAS STAYS DRY

Kansas remained true to its dry traditions of generations, defeating a state repeal proposal. But West Virginia and Florida voted for repeal and Idaho, Nebraska, South Dakota and Wyoming were tending in the same direction.

Although Moore took the New Jersey senatorship for the Democrats with a minimum of difficulty, the Republican Hoffman led Democrat Dill for the governorship.

If present trends continue 39 of the nation's governorships will be Democratic, seven Republican, one Farmer-Labor, and one Progressive.

Of all the good tidings that President Roosevelt heard at his Hyde Park, N. Y., breakfast table—before returning to Washington tonight—none meant more than that from Pennsylvania. Reed, torchbearer to a Republican senatorial tradition going back to the foundation days of the party, was losing by over 90,000 as compared with the almost 920,000 lead that put him across six years ago.

G. O. P. LEADING IN MICHIGAN

By International News Service

Detroit, Nov. 7—Michigan, traditional stronghold of the G. O. P. apparently was swinging back into the Republican ranks today.

Republicans led in the outstate, and the expected Democratic majority in the Detroit metropolitan area was disappointingly small.

For senator 2229 precincts including 100 in Wayne county, gave: Picard (D), 337,619; Vandenberg (R), 352,132.

Democratic Broom Sweeps Idaho Clean

By International News Service

Boise, Ida., Nov. 7—Democrats made a clean sweep of the gubernatorial and congressional races and re-election of Governor C. Ben Ross, Democrat, for a third term was conceded today by Republican leaders.

With 235 out of 812 precincts tabulated, Ross led Frank R. Stephan, Republican, by 8000. Republicans conceded the two congressional seats to the Democrats.

The following races were in doubt:

Michigan—F. D. Fitzgerald (R) against Arthur J. Lacy (D).
Nebraska — Dwight Griswald (R), against R. C. Cochran (D).
Wyoming—Leslie A. Miller (D), against A. M. Clark (R).

Moore Wins Senate Seat in New Jersey

By Universal Service

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 7—Governor A. Harry Moore, of New Jersey, was elected to the U. S. Senate by an overwhelming plurality.

In the contest for the governor's seat there developed a race between William L. Dill, Democrat, and Harold G. Hoffman, Republican, that became closer and closer as results poured in.

Wheeler Piles Up Lead in Montana

By International News Service

Helena, Mont., Nov. 7—Burton K. Wheeler (D), New Deal exponent, piled up an enormous majority in early returns. They gave Wheeler a three to one margin over former Federal Judge George M. Bourquin (R) for the long-term senatorship.

The same returns gave James E. Murray (D), a two to one lead over Scott Leavitt (R), for the short-term senatorship.

Byrd Leads by 6 to 1 Ratio in Virginia

By International News Service

Richmond, Va., Nov. 7—Early election returns from the entire state indicated that Senator Harry F. Byrd (D) is leading his opponent, Lawrence C. Page (R) by 6 to 1 in a 130,000 state vote. Page campaigned against the New Deal. Returns indicated the election of all nine Democratic Congressional candidates.

TIDAL SWEEP OF BALLOTS VINDICATES NEW DEAL

Democrats apparently increased in the House of Representatives their already overwhelming majority.

It will take the final figures to tell the story, but it will not be surprising if they reveal 320 Democrats in the House of 74th Congress, as compared with the 313 Democrats elected two years ago in the Roosevelt landslide.

Senators Reed in Pennsylvania, Robinson in Indiana, Fess in Ohio, Walcott of Connecticut, all bitter foes of the New Deal, went down to defeat.

The only outspoken Republican critic of the administration to have escaped the holocaust was Senator Austin—Vermont—and he skimped through by a bare 3000 votes in a state that has never been represented by a Democrat in Congress.

REPUBLICANS STUNNED

The Republicans were stunned by the extent of the Democratic sweep. At that, they were little more surprised than the Democrats themselves. For while administration leaders had hoped for and expected a creditable showing for the New Deal, never in their most optimistic moments had they secretly anticipated anything like what happened.

They thought Jim Farley was talking through his hat a few weeks ago when he said that after this election the Republican party would be reduced to its lowest point of effectiveness since its birth. He wasn't. The bitter truth of that prediction was borne home to them today as straggling final returns only served to emphasize the magnitude of the Democratic victory.

There was nothing sectional in the New Deal victory. It extended from Maine to the deep South and the far West, taking in the politically fickle grain belt that runs from Ohio to the Rockies.

JOHNSON'S BIG WIN

The outstanding sensations of this sensational contests were the defeat of Senator David A. Reed (R.) in rock-ribbed Republican Pennsylvania, the 1,500,000 victory of Senator Hiram W. Johnson in California and the apparent defeat of Senator Bronson Cutting (R.) in New Mexico.

Reed's defeat sent Joseph F. Guffey as the first Democrat in history to the Senate from Pennsylvania—which gave Boies Penrose and Matthew Quay to the Senate.

Besides Johnson, who also had the Democratic nomination, only three Republican seats were certain of re-election. They were Senators John G. Townsend, Jr., in Delaware, Senator Lynn F. Frazier in North Dakota and Senator Austin in Vermont.

With them, Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan probably will win, but he faced a tight squeeze.

SINCLAIR UNMOURNED

Democratic losses were inconsequential. They lost the governorship of California to a conservative Republican, Frank F. Merriam, but there were few Democratic tears on that account.

Upton Sinclair's kidnaping of the Democratic gubernatorial nomination and his radical "epic" plan for economic revolution had them gasping.

Anyway, among the Democratic national leaders, there was even a note of quiet satisfaction that he had been defeated.

Nor was there any particular Democratic sorrow over the failure of Democratic senatorial candidates in Wisconsin and Minnesota to win. In Wisconsin "Young Bob" LaFollette was elected as a Progressive.

In Minnesota, Henrik Shipstead was re-elected under his Farmer-Labor label.

Both have ardently supported New Deal legislation; both are persona grata to the administration.

So great was the New Deal sweep, in fact, that Mr. Roosevelt may experience the embarrassment of riches.

TOP HEAVY MAJORITIES

Top-heavy majorities lend themselves to division into blocs, and tend to minimize party discipline and solidarity. Small party majorities can be whipped into line; large ones have a tendency to be impervious to the lash of party.

It will take strong leadership to hold the 74th Congress in line for Tuesday's balloting has brought into the picture a good many people who, while outspokenly loyal to the New Deal, do not consider that it has gone far enough to be left.

Of particular satisfaction to President Roosevelt today, as he scanned the returns in his comfortable home on the high bluffs of the Hudson, was the way in which his own state of New York rallied to the support of the Democrats.

They not only picked up Congressional seats in New York, but re-elected Governor Herbert H. Lehman by a near-record vote, and captured control of the State Legislature for the first time in two decades.

When it is considered most of the vocal opposition to New Deal policies has centered in Wall Street financial circles, the result in the state becomes all the sweeter to Democratic taste.

Many notable public figures were given a vacation from public life as a result of yesterday's outpouring of votes.

In addition to Reed, Fess and Robinson, Hatfield of West Virginia, Walcott of Connecticut, close friend and spokesman of Herbert Hoover on the Senate floor in the latter days of the Hoover administration. There were Senator Hamilton F. Kean of New Jersey, whose family have been Republican overlords in New Jersey for ages; Senator Bronson Cutting, Republican Independent in New Mexico, who supported Roosevelt in 1932, and then split with the administration in the last Congress, and Henry D. Hicks of Rhode Island.

Representative Carl Mapes, Republican wheel-horse in Michigan; Representative Louis T. McFadden, Republican from Pennsylvania; Representative Robert Luce, the "scholar" of the House, and Representative Fess from Massachusetts; Representative Fred Britten of Illinois, former Republican chairman of the House naval committee also went into the discard.

VANDENBERG SURVIVES

While most Old Guard Republicans lost, one, whom a few years ago they called a "a young Turk"—Senator Vandenberg of Michigan—was re-elected over his Democratic opponent, Frank A. Picard.

Democratic leaders had sought to defeat Vandenberg, who, like Reed of Pennsylvania, has been mentioned as 1936 Republican presidential timber.

Both House party leaders were re-elected. Representative Byrns of Tennessee, Democratic candidate for the speakership, had no opposition. Representative Snell, New York, Republican, won easily.

The dean of the House, foreign-born Adolph Sabath, Democrat, was elected for his 16th term from Illinois. Britten was the Republican dean.

Representative Edgar Howard, picturesque long-haired chairman of the Indian affairs committee, was defeated by a Republican in Nebraska. He was William Jennings Bryan's secretary in the 1896 presidential campaign.

Mrs. Kathryn O'Laughlin, Democrat, was defeated in Kansas. Republicans picked up three Michigan seats held by Democrats, but lost one. One Michigan Republican, Earl C. Michener, who lost in 1932, came back.

One Tammany Hall Democrat—Lanzetta in New York—fell before a Republican.

G. O. P. Won't 'Stay Licked'

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 7—Henry P. Fletcher, Republican national chairman, said today that his party was "licked" in yesterday's election, but didn't have to "stay licked."

"When you are licked, you are licked, but you don't have to stay licked," Fletcher said in a one-sentence statement on the returns.

Senator Hastings (R.) of Delaware, chairman of the Republican congressional senatorial committee, likewise confined his statement to one sentence:

"Yesterday's election demonstrated that the New Deal, like a dangerous disease, must run its course and that the crisis has not yet been reached."

2 LAFOLLETTES SCORE WINS

By Associated Press.

Milwaukee, Nov. 7—The La Follette brothers, heading the Progressive party they organized only six months ago, were elected Governor and U. S. Senator in Wisconsin's general election yesterday.

The elder brother, Robert, won handily, but Phil was given a close race for the governorship by the Democratic incumbent, A. G. Schmedeman.

On the basis of incomplete returns, the Progressives won seven of the state's ten Congressional seats and the lesser state offices.

Democratic Victory Seen in New Mexico

By International News Service

Santa Fe, N. M., Nov. 7—A Democratic landslide was indicated in New Mexico.

In 180 precincts out of 785 give for long term Senate Chavez (D), 23,017; Cutting (P), 21,092. For short term, Hatch (D), 25,308; Dillon (R), 17,538.

Martin, Democrat, Takes Oregon Lead

By International News Service

Portland, Ore., Nov. 7—In the three-cornered race for governorship of Oregon, Charles H. Martin, Democrat and champion of the New Deal was leading with 46.3% votes in incomplete returns from 742 precincts of 1647 in the state.

Joe E. Dunne, Republican, with 36,752, was hard pressed by Peter Zimmerman, Independent Leftist, with 34,113 votes.

Democrat Ousts G. O. P. Senator in Missouri

By International News Service

St. Louis, Nov. 7—With a tide of Democratic ballots Missouri voters appeared to have swept into office a Democratic United States senator in place of the incumbent Republican and to have held on to two of the state's 13 Congressional seats.

Judge Harry S. Truman, (D), led his Republican opponent, Senator Roscoe C. Patterson, incumbent, by nearly two to one with more than a third of the state's 4271 precincts heard from on the Senatorial race.

Wyoming Votes for Prohibition Repeal

By International News Service

Cheyenne, Wyo., Nov. 7—Indications early today were that Wyoming voters had determined by an overwhelming majority to repeal the prohibition amendment in the state constitution. Wyoming voted a year ago to repeal the federal prohibition amendment. Early returns indicated a Democratic sweep.

Kansas Elects G. O. P. Governor, Stays Dry

By International News Service

Topeka, Kan., Nov. 7—Kansas remained Republican and dry on the basis of latest returns which showed Governor Alf M. Landon, Republican incumbent, virtually assured of re-election and defeat of the proposal to repeal the state's 54-year-old bone dry law practically certain.

PENNSYLVANIA OUSTS G. O. P.; REED BEATEN

By International News Service

Philadelphia, Nov. 7—Shedding its time-worn cloak of Republicanism, Pennsylvania succumbed to the lure of the "New Deal" today.

In a stunning uprising against tradition the nation's second largest state recorded a thumping triumph for President Roosevelt and the new Democratic regime by choosing Joseph F. Guffey, lusty champion of the national administration, for the United States Senate, and George T. Earle, erstwhile American minister to Austria, for governorship.

With little more than a thousand of the state's 7956 polling districts unaccounted for, Guffey was leading by more than 76,000 votes over his Republican adversary, David Aiken Reed, the commonwealth's incumbent senior senator whose distaste for the New Deal never lacked blunt expression.

Earle was steadily drawing away from his Republican foe, Attorney General William A. Schnader, by a margin of 30,000 ballots.

Of Pennsylvania's 7956 precincts, 6797 gave:

For Senator: Guffey 1,311,245, Reed 1,234,896.

For Governor: Earle 1,293,979, Schnader 1,264,963.

Almost as unparalleled as the election of Pennsylvania's first Democratic Senator was the overthrow of the Republican control of the state's congressional delegation. Returns gave the Democrats eight additional Congressmen, with the prospect that the party will capture three more seats, giving them sole control of Pennsylvania's congressional delegation, consisting of 34 members.

Guffey Sees Victory for Roosevelt

By Associated Press

Pittsburgh, Nov. 7—Joseph F. Guffey, who defeated Senator David A. Reed, Republican, for the Senate today said, the election shows "the people are back of the President and his program."

He said:

"This is a tremendous victory for President Roosevelt and the New Deal. It is notice to every reactionary in America that the people are behind the President and his program. Surely the time has now come for all factions to cooperate with the President, not only in bringing an end to the depression but to the establishment of a new social order for the American people."

RITCHIE WINS FIFTH TERM

By International News Service

Baltimore, Nov. 7—Governor Albert D. Ritchie, Democrat, apparently was elected to his fifth term in Maryland as belated returns came in today, but his margin over Harry W. Nice, Republican, was slim.

Returns from 609 of Baltimore's 685 precincts gave Ritchie 105,241, Nice 86,087.

George L. Radcliffe (D.), led former Senator Joseph I. France (R.) for U. S. senator 106,473 to 68,371. All six Democratic candidates for Congress were considered safely in.

O'Connor Is Easy Victor Over Riley

Charles S. O'connor, former Boston school committeeman, had an easy three to one victory over Clerk Joseph Riley in the contest for clerk of the Supreme Judicial Court in the final tabulation today. O'Connor won the Democratic nomination over his opponent by only 1500 votes, but he defeated the same man, who was running on the Republican ticket this time by 100,000.

VERMONT AND N. H. WIN FOR G. O. P.

New England, led by a Democratic sweep in Rhode Island, that looks in its final figures like a one-way street, went over overwhelmingly to the New Deal as the result of the elections.

Rhode Island's complete Democratic slate carried into office a United States senator, the governor, two congressmen, the entire state officers' ticket, and the mayor of Providence, running for re-election.

New Hampshire continued with a Republican for governor, and sent one Republican and one Democrat to the United States House of Representatives, but a Democratic executive council will take office for the first time in the history of the state.

VERMONT GETS G. O. P. TOTAL

In Vermont, Senator Warren R. Austin, Republican, retained his senatorial seat, but not until rock-ribbed Vermont had her closest call since the Civil War of toppling into the Democratic column. Only a margin of 3700 votes assured Senator Austin a voice in the forthcoming Congress, defeating his Democratic rival, Fred C. Martin.

In Connecticut Francis T. Maloney, former mayor of Meriden, was elected to the Senate, succeeding the state's senior senator, Frederic C. Walcott, Republican. Maloney's victory climaxed a brilliant campaign in which he lauded the New Deal.

He received an unofficial total of 273,535 votes compared to Walcott's 248,413, a margin of 25,117.

Governor Theodore Francis Green, of Rhode Island, and all the subordinate state officials were elected to give the state solid Democratic control. Congressman Francis B. Condon and his Democratic colleague, John M. O'Cnnell, bothed feated their Republican opponents handily. And Peter G. Gerry, a prominent "New Dealer" defeated the present Republican Senator Felix Hebert to round out the little state's landslide.

BRIDGES TAKES N. H.

In a tight finish that remained in doubt until the last precinct was heard from, H. Styles Bridges, Republican, was elected to succeed the retiring Republican governor of New Hampshire, John G. Wynant, over John B. Sullivan, the Democratic opponent who nearly succeeded in making history.

Bridges' victory was by a hollow one, however, in view of the fact that he will have a Democratic council to contend with for the first time in the history of the Granite State. Three Democrats and only two Republicans were placed in the council.

Vermont is all Republican, electing Lieutenant-Governor Charles M. Smith to succeed the present Republican Governor Wilson. He beat out his Democratic opponent, James P. Leamy by 47,000 votes to 34,000. The same margin elected Charles Plumley, Republican candidate for congressman-at-large to succeed seat in the House, over Carroll E. Jenkins.

But Vermont got a real political jolt when the issue of the election between United tSates Senator Warren R. Austin and his Democratic opponent, Fred C. Martin, remained in doubt right down the stretch. Austin won, but the narrow margin that Vermont, Republican since pre-Civil War days, nearly was subjected to its first political set back in generations.

Given Six Months as Illegal Voter

Henry Brewin, 47, of Howard street, West End, one of seven persons arrested on charges of illegal voting, was sentenced to six months in Roxbury court today after he had pleaded guilty.

Brewin appealed and was held in $1000 bail.

The case of Charles P. Brunnell, 32, of Massachusetts avenue, South End was continued until tomorrow after he pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. Mary Finn, 32, of Highland avenue, and David Cushing 34 of Washington street both of Roxbury, were held in default of $50 bail each for non-appearance. All were charged with illegal voting.

UPSETS MARK VOTING ON LIQUOR

Upsets and surprises featured the first state-wide balloting on the liquor question, many instances being recorded of wet towns going dry and dry towns going wet.

Holbrook, which had always been dry before prohibition, went in favor of both hard liquor and light wines and beers. Prior to the election only light wines and beer had been permitted.

Dover had not brought the subject of liquor up for a vote prior to this election, but today it is wet, favoring light wines and beer, although no hard liquor will be permitted.

A peculiar twist to the voting, which placed hard liquor and the light wines and beer in separate categories, was brought to light in Holland, which voted in favor of hard liquor, but against light wines and beer.

A tie was recorded in Truro on hard liquor and light wines and beer squeezed by with a margin of four votes.

Springfield went solidly wet, as did Nahant, Leverett, Hull and Chatham.

Olson, Shipstead Lead in Minnesota

By International News Service

St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 7—The re-election of Governor Floyd B. Olson and Senator Henrik Shipstead, Farmer-Laborite, were indicated on the basis of returns from scattered precincts.

Olson polled 119,268 votes against 84,458 for Martin A. Nelson, the Republican candidate, in returns from 370 of 3699 precincts. Senator Shipstead was leading his opponent, Congressman Einar Holdale, (D), on the same returns.

Parkman Wins Senate Fight

Despite opposition by leaders in his own party, Senator Henry Parkman, Jr., of the Back Bay, was re-elected to the State Senate by only 434 votes in the Third Suffolk district.

The Republican trio of Innes, Goulston, and Bottomley, alligned against Parkman since the last mayoralty contest, when Parkman opposed Nichols, had to swing the election to John W. Lyons, Democratic candidate.

A recount is expected to be demanded.

BAY STATE ADDS 2 DEMOCRATS TO HOUSE

The Massachusetts delegation in the National House of Representatives may have a Democratic majority.

At a late hour today, with one contest still in doubt, the Democrats had captured seven seats and the Republicans a like number.

This means a gain of two seats by the Democrats. Congressman Robert Luce, Republican, was defeated by Mayor Richard M. Russell of Cambridge, Democrat, in the ninth district. Congressman Frank H. Foss, Fitchburg, Republican, was unseated by Joseph E. Casey, Clinton, Democrat, in the third district.

Both Luce and Foss are veterans of many years' service. The former has by 8695. He polled 58,-983 to Russell's 59,561. These figures are complete.

Foss lost to Casey by 325.

The doubtful contest is that in the thirteenth district between Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth, Milton, Republican, and Francis H. Foy Quincy Democrat.

Other Democrats to win besides Russell and Casey, are Congressmen William J. Greenfield, Springfield; William P. Connery, Lynn; Arthur D. Healey, Somerville; John W. McCormack, Boston, and John P. Higgins, Boston.

Republicans re-elected are Allen T. Treadway, Stockbridge; Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Lowell; Pehr G. Holmes, Worcester; A. Piatt Andrew, Gloucester; George Holden Tinkham, Boston; Joseph W. Martin, Jr. NorthAttleboro, and Charles L. Gifford, Barnstable.

Tinkham Loses! To Tinkham

Congressman George Holden Tinkham, Republican, of the 10th district, not only conceded himself a victory, but also a defeat today. Nevertheless he is still congressman.

It is like this, as the congressman explained himself:

"It appears that I won an overwhelming victory over George Holden Tinkham, Democrat, although there are some who believe the Democrat won.

"In any event it seems to me that I can represent Mr. Tinkham, the Democrat, at the party caucus. Otherwise a vote will be missing."

The answer is that George Holden Tinkham had both Republican and Democratic nominations.

Norris Wins Single House Legislature

Election Sidelights

Louis T. McFaddan, Republican congressman from Pennsylvania who made three efforts to impeach President Hoover, is defeated.

Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., New York Republican, who was re-elected himself, but didn't like the way other Republicans got snowed under, said:

"The people are still on the side of Santa Claus."

The proposed $40,000,000 state bond issue for unemployment relief won in New York state by 1,500,000 votes.

Although he wasn't running for office this year Senator Huey is taxing the big fellow and relieving the little fellow, was ratified.

Franklin D. Roosevelt's "third" home town—Warm Springs, Georgia, voted Democratic with all its 44 ballots. Washington, D. C., and Hyde Park, New York, also claim him as a citizen.

Al Smith in his brown derby voted and then went home to help Mrs. Smith celebrate her birthday, three before the former New York Governor did the same thing. It was in 1928.

In Connecticut Democrats wrested from Republicans all state offices, three of the eight shrievalty posts and appear to have won 17 of the 35 seats in the State Senate, with 18 going to Republicans and the remaining three to the Socialists elected in Bridgeport.

Mrs. Caroline O'Day elected to Congress from New York and Mrs. Isabella Greenway, re-elected from Arizona, are bosom friends of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, who campaigned for Mrs. O'Day. George W. Radcliffe, elected senator from Maryland, formerly was associated with the President in an insurance company.

Electing their entire state ticket, Illinois Democrats send to Washington at least 22 of the state's 27 members of Congress, as against 19 in the last House.

The Illinois congressional race saw Fred A. Britten, veteran Republican, swept into the discard with Oscar De Priest, Negro Republican of Chicago's South Side, who lost to Arthur Mitchell (D), another Negro.

In North Dakota Mrs. William Langer, wife of ousted Republican governor, trails Thomas H. Moodie, Democratic opponent in governorship fight.

MICHIGAN NOW BACKS G. O. P.

By Associated Press

Detroit, Nov. 7—Michigan, which joined the Democratic parade two years ago, seemed headed back toward its traditional Republicanism today, on the face of incomplete election returns.

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg, Republican, had piled up a substantial majority over his Democratic opponent, Frank A. Picard, outstate and, with the first 400 precincts from Democratic Wayne County (Detroit) cutting only slightly into his lead, appeared certain of re-election.

Frank D. Fitzgerald, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, seemed equally certain of election over Arthur J. Lacy, his Democratic rival.

Democratic Slate Sweeps Arizona

By International News Service

Phoenix, Ariz., Nov. 7—Democrats continued to occupy every saddle on the range in Arizona politics today.

Republicans conceded that U. S. Senator Henry B. Ashurst, Congresswoman Isabella Greenway and Governor B. B. Moeur, all Democrats, had been re-elected by large majorities.

By International News Service

Ligonier, Pa., Nov. 7—Rubbing the sleep from his eyes after awakening at noon at the exclusive Rolling Rock Club here today, U. S. Senator, David A. Reed, stalwart Republican, conceded the election of Joseph F. Guffey, staunch supporter of President Roosevelt's "New Deal."

Reed immediately wired the senator-elect of Pennsylvania:

"I congratulate you on your victory."

1934 MODEL MASTERPIECE GAS RANGE

$62.10 AND YOUR OLD RANGE

Plus Small Installation & Carrying Charges

HEAT CONTROL
Heat control regulates temperature to any desired degree. Good baking is automatic on this range.

SPEEDLUX BURNERS
No holes to get clogged. These discs make rings of flame which cook faster than ever before.

AUTOMATIC LIGHTING
Even the ovens of this range are automatically lighted for you. Top burners too, of course.

The gas companies of Greater Boston bought 1500 of the 1934 Masterpiece Glenwoods early this fall. Now they are almost all sold.

It was the largest single order ever placed with the Glenwood Range Co. and the quantity enabled us to offer this regular $88 gas range at this unheard-of price. But as both the time and the quantity are necessarily limited you must get your order in soon if you want to make sure of saving almost 30% on a new Masterpiece Glenwood.

Our special price, for this offer only, is $69 . . . less 10% allowance for your old range, making a net purchase price of only $62.10. In this way you actually save $25.90 and, with no further down payment, you can arrange to pay the balance for as little as a dollar a week.

The automatic lighting of the oven burners (as well as the top burners) is one of the most appealing features of the Masterpiece model. That, plus its quick, clean Speedlux Burners, its automatic heat control and its beautiful modern design, have made hundreds of women say to themselves "Here is my chance to get rid of that old range and make my kitchen more attractive." And, of course, being a Glenwood it Makes Cooking Easy, too.

SILENT, HAPPY, ROOSEVELT IS BACK ON JOB

By Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Nov. 7—President Roosevelt, happy at the mandate of the people to carry on his New Deal, turned his full attention today to public affairs.

The President made no comment on the returns from the general elections, but Postmaster-General James A. Farley, who talked to him by telephone from New York city, said he was "overjoyed with the returns throughout the nation."

There was no doubt about the enthusiasm over the result, but Roosevelt already was thinking about the White House and the nation's problems. He will go to Washington by special train tonight and will be at his desk tomorrow.

NEW DEAL THE ISSUE

Government leaders held a conviction that the end of the campaign will lead to a more normal progress of administration activities. The President, beyond any doubt, has a well developed picture of national conditions after a summer and fall of study, while polling were bubbling.

He took a public part in the campaign in his own state, where he endorsed his successor, Democratic Governor Herbert H. Lehman, for re-election, but the candidates made it clear that the New Deal was the primary issue.

After retiring early last night, before final returns were in, and when a very substantial New England victory already could be seen, Mr. Roosevelt arose early today to learn of the results.

FORGETS PARTY LINES

The few inquiries that came from the temporary White House during the early returns indicated an interest in individuals—Republican independents as well as Democrats. It did not seem to be so much a question of party but as of person, interested in the New Deal.

The President was pleased to learn that his own precinct—for the fourth time in history—had gone Democratic. The district contributed 499 votes to Governor Lehman's victory over his Republican opponent, Robert Moses, to 376 for Moses.

Indications were that there will be no statement from the President as to the election—but that he will speak by actions, rather than words.

ELECTED TO MASSACHUSETTS GENERAL COURT

Merriam to Study Mooney Pardon

Long Beach, Cal., Nov. 7 (US)—Consideration of a pardon for Tom Mooney will be given by Governor Frank F. Merriam if he is returned to office, the Republican incumbent declared in an address at a Service Club luncheon.

The governor said that he heretofore had declined to consider such an application from the famous prisoner because he succeeded the late Governor James Rolph, who had considered a pardon, and was not "a duly elected governor of California."

A NEW GOLD RUSH

A NEW GOLD RUSH is sweeping the country, not in Canyons or Gulches, but in old Bureau Drawers.

When President Roosevelt, with a stroke of his pen, increased the price of gold, it started millions of people searching old corners, old bureaus, chests and closets for gold, old gold (that is bits of out of date jewelry, dental gold and old watches). Today these are worth more than they have been for two generations.

Is This Too Good for Your Cough?

Creomulsion may be a better help than you need. It combines seven helps in one. It is made for quick relief, for safety.

Mild coughs often yield to lesser helps. No one can tell. No one knows which factor will do most for any certain cough. So careful people, more and more, are using Creomulsion for any cough that starts.

The cost is a little more than a single help. But your druggist is authorized to guarantee it, so it costs nothing if it fails to bring you quick relief. Coughs are danger signals. For safety's sake, deal with them in the best way known.

WINFIELD SHEEHAN WILL PUT "LITTLE COLONEL" SERIES ON THE SCREEN

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

It was Rodeo Night last night at the Coconnut Grove, and being an indoor fellow afraid of cows and the like you can't imagine how I wished I could be present to forgather with the stars of Col. Johnson's show to the rhythm of Jacqueline Renard and his bandsisters. Harry Knight, one of the best of the ropers, wears only a size 5½ boot. He weighs about 180. His shoe-size is the same as George M. Cohan's. Mr. Cohan weighs less than 140. Mr. Knight doubled one winter in Hollywood in western pictures for the girl stars. He says he likes rodeos much better.

Joe Welch of Carlsbad, N. M., another of the rodeo stars, had a brief career also in Hollywood. He is called "Tuffy" and the name fits him. He doesn't like being called "The Rodeo's handsomest cowboy," which persists nevertheless. At a California sectional Rodeo, a motion picture director entered "Tuffy" last year to undergo a screen test and the results were so satisfactory that "Tuffy" was signed for a thriller.

"They drove me plumb crazy or daffey," the handsome cowboy retaird. "First they got me in a makeup room and started pullin' my eyebrows out with tweezers. They made me put on a pair of silk cream-colored pants. The hawses they had for me to ride looked and acted as if he had never been outside a livery stable. Boy, I run out of that there shindig with the cream-colored silk pants still on. I wish I could go back there and get my real ridin' britches, but I guess they're gone. The magnates have gone in for polo."

Another Rodeo character I enjoyed was Bob Askin, who hails from Jersey, Mont. Bob is an adept in the cowboys' three R's, ropin', ridin' and rasslin'. He was the Roosevelt trophy holder, the highest honor that a cowboy could win prior to Col. Johnson's entrance as a producer of championship contests. He forsook rodeos for a year to supervise a California millionaire's ranch in the San Bruno valley. But the millionaire wished to raise chickens on the ranch, and what's more, he did.

"In the winter", Cowboy Askin said, "I had a new job. Thar there men made me turn over 2000 eggs in incubators every two days so they'd hatch on both sides, I guess. Look a-here Mister, I told him, 'Am I here to ride hawsers, or raise chickens?' I thought he might say 'raise chickens', and being a polite cowboy, I left before he had a chance to answer."

In honor of Chick Johnson's birthday, his partner Ole Olsen gave a party at his hotel this morning. The famous comedians entertain lavishly once a year apiece. Each is the host at the other's birthday. Breaking records at the Orpheum, Olsen and Chick are seeking a musical show to follow their highly successful experience in "Take A Chance" and your chronicler, a promising playwright, may do a piece for them with a New Orleans background.

Shirley Temple to Head Cast in Film for Children; Irving Cummings to Direct

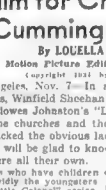
By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright 1934 by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 7—In answer to 10,000 pleading children's letters, Winfield Sheehan has purchased the screen rights to Anne Fellowes Johnston's "Little Colonel" series for Shirley Temple. The churches and the women's clubs which have so bitterly attacked the obvious lack of suitable entertainment for the children will be glad to know that at last the little folk will have a picture all their own.

Those of us who have children know how avidly the youngsters read this "Little Colonel" series.



D. O. De Sylva, who has been appointed by Mr. Sheehan to produce the picture, has a great responsibility to the children and so has Irving Cummings, the director—but they are planning to keep faith with Shirley's public.

These radio singers who Louella O. Parsons warble their sweetest never know when some producer is listening in. Jack Warner and Hal Wallis turned on the radio during their dinner hour a few weeks ago and heard James Melton. They decided he had the voice that Warner Brothers needed and so he was paged and put under contract. Melton gets here shortly and will be put into "New York, London and Paris" or "Broadway Gondolier" or both.

Edmund Goulding, who has more ideas to the minute than any one I know, is taking his ideas with him to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. He just signed a new contract with Irving Thalberg to produce and direct "The Flame Within," his own play. It's the story of a woman psychiatrist, who cures everybody but herself. Eddie jotted it down while he was making up his mind about his future plans. Made Christians will undoubtedly be given the lead in what should be a highly dramatic screen play. At least the way Eddie tells it, it sounds interesting.

Max Baer whose manager watches him like a hawk, until soon he leaving wicked Hollywood. Max won't make his picture, "Kids on the Cuff," Adela Rogers St. John's story, until February for several reasons, one of which is that Al Jolson believes a picture released just about the time of the championship fight will have more value. Then there is Al Hall, who is supposed to direct the picture. Al is all signed up to direct Mae West's next, "Now I'm a Lady." It was Al, you see, who helped Lowell Sherman with the direction of "She Done Him Wrong" and Mae put in a bid for his services—so he can't be spared to Max.

Both of them have many friends in Hollywood both among the writing fraternity and motion picture stars.

Upton Sinclair, California candidate for governor, only a short time ago was writing me letters from Mexico, press agenting Serge Eisenstein's picture. Mr. Eisenstein, you will remember, in the employ of the Soviet Government, came here to make a picture for Paramount, but Paramount became worried over his radical ideas and released him from his contract. The Mexican movie was an independent venture with Sinclair actively interested in it.

NAZI SECRECY BALKS AID TO U. S. GIRL

Berlin Nov. 7 A wall of official reticence today barred American Ambassador William E. Dodd in an attempt to get to the aid of Miss Isobel Lill an Steele, small American music student, who has spent 88 days in Munich prison, accused by a Nazi friend to whom she freely expressed her views on the Hitler regime.

The exact nature of the charges being formulated against Miss Steele have not been declared. They are believed to be of a nature that would make her case like the death sentence of Fritz Charoll, proceedings before the People's court, Nazi terror tribunal composed of jurists and responsible.

Miss Steele was jailed August 30. But word to the American consulate-general in Berlin from the government officials was not transmitted to Ambassador Dodd until Monday. Steele is to be tried on a capital offense before the People's court.

Miss Steele, a native of Evanston, Ill., a graduate of New Roche, N. Y., and a student of G. Griffith Johnson Jr., of Washington, D. C., were arrested in March two weeks after a paper of espionage when Miss Lucier sent a camera across a parade ground on which storm troops were marching. They were released after a nine-hour detention when Miss Lucier's protest that the film on the camera had been used ex-posed was found to be true.

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1934

This Is Life
by ROBERT E. ROGERS

In the most recent compilation of Rooseveltiana compiled by Don Wharton and published by A. A. Knopf under the title "The Roosevelt Omnibus" there is, among much other novel and out of the way material a genealogical chart which shows how homogeneous after all, was the old American stock previous to the Civil War and before immigration really got going in this country.

Robert E. Rogers

It has been said, you know, that probably nearly everybody, if the truth were known, could find a place on the family tree of William the Conqueror, so vast is the multiplication of a single stock over nearly a thousand years.

In the same manner the American eugenists attempt to prove that the fountain head of most of the notable families in this country were the redoubtable Johnathan Edwards and his wife. That is the germ plasm theory which believes that environment can do little to modify innate genius or innate baseness to borrow a concept from H. G. Wells' "Modern Utopia").

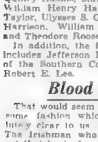
To come back to the Roosevelts, Mr. Wharton claims to show by his genealogical chart that the present dynasty of Roosevelts can trace either a direct or collateral kinship to 11 previous presidents of the United States: Washington, John Adams, James Madison, John Quiney Adams, Martin Van Buren, William Henry Harrison, Zachary Taylor, Ulysses S. Grant, Benjamin Harrison, William Howard Taft, and Theodore Roosevelt.

In addition, the family tree also includes Jefferson Davis, president of the Southern Confederacy, and Robert E. Lee.

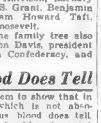
Blood Does Tell

That would seem to show that in some fashion which is not altogether clear to us blood does tell. The Irishman who likes to point out that he is descended from the ancient kings of Ireland is on the right track.

John Buchan novelist, historian and member of parliament, once wrote a kind of novel made up of short stories, the theme of which was that behind the greatness of Abraham Lincoln, born under the humblest of circumstances, there may well have been some of the finest and most aristocratic blood of Europe, all the way down from the dark ages and the crusades.



MRS. F. D. ROOSEVELT



PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT

Certainly the remarkable persistences of intellectual and moral traits in the Roosevelts of this and the past generations is cheerful evidence for the expounders of the genetics theory of human capacity.

Theodore and Theodora junior and Alice and Franklin and Eleanor and James have recognizably a good deal in common. All of them, except perhaps Theodore junior and Alice, show a decided independence of the orthodoxies of their social and financial class.

Alice, although a Tory, indeed, brings to her job of being a Tory a rather refreshing independence of thought and conduct.

Most of them, in some fashion, have challenged the mores and conventions of the class in which they were reared. Some source of energy within them forces them to lay their course toward liberalism—in the old sense of the word—and progressivism in the new. The power of the unknown X we call human nature is still dominant.

That is why I frequently get a bit bored with the average Open Forum audience in these parts. I spoke before one the other evening and I was interested how true the Forum audience, whether in the metropolis or the suburbs or elsewhere in the state, runs true to form.

Criminal Stock

Its chief sign is that it invariably resists any attempt to ascribe our present social conditions to anything but economic forces. It is hipped on the economic interpretation of history. It swallows whole the most rigid dogmas of socialist economics or "liberal" politics and it resents any attempt on anyone's part (mine for instance) to hint that there are other forces than economics at work in the world, other kinds of men than the economic man.

No matter what turn the discussion takes the habitual heckler

NO LONGER 'FINE AND DANDY' WITH THEM

Lovers' Lane Victim Not a Woman But a Man

MRS. WARBURG

JAMES PAUL WARBURG

Their Songs Tell

"Fine and Dandy" Fades, Now "Can This Be Love"

WARBURGS ROMANCE TO END IN DIVORCE AT RENO

New York, Nov. 7—All isn't "Fine and Dandy," any more, with the James Paul Warburgs.

They were one of Broadway's best liked and supposedly most ideally matched young couples not so many, many months ago when they were collaborating in the writing of music and lyrics for the song hits, "Fine and Dandy" and "Can This Be Love?"

Mrs. Warburg, who was Kay Swift, is already in Reno. Neither would indicate whether they parted in friendship, although they collaborated on a song which ran:

"This is how the story ends:
He's going to turn me down and say
"Can't we be friends?" "

Warburg was a member of the original Roosevelt brain trust. Under the late William Woodin also musically inclined, he served as Under-Secretary of the Treasury. Lately he has withdrawn completely from brain trust influence, however, to become one of the severest critics of New Deal monetary policies. He is vice-chairman of the Bank of Manhattan Company.

The Warburgs were married in 1918. Mrs. Warburg, daughter of the late Samuel Swift, music critic, was then a newcomer to Tin Pan alley. Warburg, son of the late Paul M. Warburg, governor of the Federal Reserve board, was an ensign in the navy.

Tunes which Mrs. Warburg snatched from her piano keyboard and words her financier-husband wrote for these tunes are credited with beginning the torch song vogue. The "Can't We Be Friends" ditty was introduced in 1929 by Libby Holman in the first "Little Show."

Murder Seen

VICTIM SLAIN MORE THAN YEAR AGO

By JAMES F. McENANEY

Foxboro, Nov. 7—Medical science today reconstructed the dismembered and lime-corroded bones, found in secluded "Lovers' Lane" last night, as the skeleton of a man. This theory came after the police had pointed to the long hair as proof positive that it was that of a woman.

Dr. William Brickley, assistant to Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath of Boston, however, flatly disagreed with them. He said that his examination proved beyond doubt that the bones were those of a man between 25 and 30 years of age.

The dead man, he said, was tall and had broad shoulders. His teeth were perfect, and he had chestnut hair.

He was killed—probably 12 to 18 months ago—by a bullet that entered his skull below the right ear and emerged through the upper portion of the left side of the head, according to Dr. Brickley.

ARMS SEVERED

The arms were cut from the body by a powerful person wielding a heavy axe, with which he also cut the torso in two, he said, as he announced that the remains would be taken to the Northern Mortuary, Boston, for further examination by Dr. Magrath and himself.

The skull and the torso of the victim in this case were found in two bags hidden in the woods off a lonely road here known to townspeople as "Lovers' Lane." The name of the road is Beach street.

State Detective Michael Fleming, dispatched to the case by District Attorney Edmund R. Dewing, was at work. So were half a dozen other state troopers and a number of Foxboro detectives working under Chief Dean.

LIME IN BAGS

The burlap bags and their contents were filled with lime that some expert, skilled in biology, had used to bring quick decomposition to the murder victim's flesh.

Two Norwood high school football players, looking for old spare parts of automobiles in a nearby dump, made the find. The boys are George Masteka, 17, of Third street, and Wilter Sidorwicz, of Concord avenue, both of Norwood.

HE'S DEAD
46,459 Vote for Him

Although he died a week ago, Edwin C. Lewis, (R), was re-elected associate county commissioner in Essex County by a plurality of 938 votes.

Complete returns gave him 46,459 against 45,520 for Edgar S. Rideout, (R) and 42,755 for Louis A. Dion, (D).

LAKE DRAGGED
Jacket Found in Webster Search

Eagle Lake, Me., Nov. 7—Dragging of the lake, aided by observations of the lake bottom from an airplane, will be carried on again today in an attempt to secure the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seymour Webster, young couple, object of several weeks' search and now believed drowned.

Evidence of disaster was increased with the discovery of Webster's water-soaked leather jacket and kapok cushion within a quarter mile stretch on an isolated part of the lake shore.

Bluff Wins
Storekeeper Yells, Bandits Flee

Directing a call for aid to the back of his store when three hold up men, one of them armed, entered his store on Intervale street, Roxbury, Samuel Levy bluffed the men into prompt flight.

He saved $20 by his quick thinking.

It was all a ruse. There was no one in the back of the store.

HIS STUDIES MUST BE DONE SO YOUNGER CURLEY SON GETS HIS LESSONS PAT, LETS IT GO AT THAT

It's swell being the son of the Governor-elect, says Francis, youngest son of former Mayor James M. Curley, but school teachers do not allow excuses and studies must be done. A Boston Evening American Photographer snapped Francis hard at work with his books while the rest of the family received congratulations on his father's sweeping victory.

FORGIVE!
CHILE PRAYS FOR 3 DAYS

By Associated Press

Santiago, Chile, Nov. 7—Archbishop Campillo today ordered three days of contrition throughout Chile with churches performing the act of consecration and petitioning the Virgin Del Carmen to ask God to forgive Chile.

The archbishop's order was part of an almost unprecedented religious reaction in the nation to a radical deputy's speech in Parliament last Monday, interpreted by Conservative (Church Party) deputies as a blur against Christ.

The radical deputy, Eleodoro Guzman, during a debate on a budget item referring to government subsidies to be paid private schools, brought the name of Christ into his remarks.

'Cheer up!'
Then Shot Brings End of All

Shot to death, the body of Benjamin J. P. Morrison, 32, an advertising man, Lamark road, Brook line, today was found in a North End print shop. Thirty feet from the dead man's body was a .32 calibre rifle

Morrison apparently was in a despondent mood last evening when employes of the print shop—where he had an office—left for home.

Miss Rose B. Kaplan, of 1630 Commonwealth avenue, Brighton, said she heard him call his wife A little later, Michael Gordon, of Putney street, Roxbury, said to him:

"Cheer up, old man, things are bound to be better."

Girls Are Very Nice, But Grid Stars Need Rest

HANLEY PLEADS THAT DATES BE MADE ONLY FOR SATURDAY

Girls are okay for inspiration, and would make better cheer leaders than men, according to "Pat" Hanley, Boston University football coach, but . . .

Mr. Hanley would really regard it as a personal favor if the girls would keep away from members of the football team during the mid-week and confine all dates to Saturday nights.

All this was revealed in B. U. News today in an article written by Sylvia Simons, girl reporter.

You see, "Pat" believes that with the practice sessions and class studies the boys have their hands full.

"Understand," averred the gridiron boss, "I have no objection to the boys seeing the girls as long as they don't overdo it.

"I don't want the boys to become hermits and spend all their time wasting away thinking about what they have missed. I would like to have the girls use discretion in the matter of dates."

But when it comes to inspiration, then the girls can play their part, the mentor points out.

"Get into the stands, girls, and cheer, and give the boys inspiration. And perhaps we ought to have female cheer leaders to get the boys a-cheering too."

Just 'Miss Swanson' Again

MICHAEL FARMER GLORIA SWANSON

Bulletin to eligible bachelors: Screen Star Gloria Swanson is a single lady again. She didn't like being plain Mrs. Michael Farmer any more than she liked being the Marquise de la Falaise de la Coudraye. So, thanks to a divorce decree allowed today, she's boss once more of her own heart.

GLORIA'S DAY
Miss Swanson Tells It to Judge

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 7—Gloria Swanson, film star, is scheduled to go into Superior Court today and seek a divorce from her fourth husband, Michael Farmer, handsome Irish sportsman.

Miss Swanson and Farmer were married at Elmsford, N. Y., August 16, 1931. A technicality necessitated a second ceremony at Yuma, Ariz., on November 9, 1931. Their daughter, Bricget Michaels, was born April 8, 1932.

The divorce complaint against farmer, alleging cruelty, was filed here last May 14. Farmer did not oppose it.

O. O. McIntyre
NEW YORK
DAY BY DAY

New York, Nov. 7—Henry Collins Brown reveals interesting history of the metropolis in a new volume on old New York. One learns the Dutch called Broadway "Der Heere Straet," The High Wagon Road. And the English called it the Broadway after their old English village.

He has discovered that it was at No. 1 Broadway, once old Koch's tavern that the Marble emperor was born. Hawthorne, Fenimore Cooper and Thackeray have paid tribute to Koch's. The first theater was on John street. Washington often attended performances with the First Lady.

The first newspaper was The Gazette. The editor could have been a great help to the Colonists in their hour of need, but he was muzzled by a British censor. In the formative days of Manhattan a sea voyage to Europe could be made in two weeks if the winds were favorable.

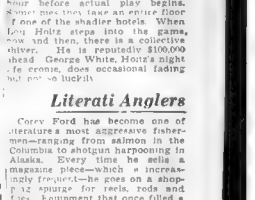
Broadway always had its excitement. An early newspaper paragrapher said "Yesterday a respectable riding citizen crossing the Common on Chatham Hall Parade was attacked by a furious cow, which pursued him to the corner of Beekman street, where it gored him to death."

O. O. McIntyre

Broadway's floating dice games are getting bigger and floatier. They are moored for only 12 hours at their various landings and the games last as long as the ships just a half hour before actual play begins. Sometimes twenty tons of entire floor space on the shallow boats. When Lou Holtz steps into the game, now and then, there is a collective shiver. He is reputedly $100,000 ahead. George White, Holtz's night life cronie, does occasional fading but not so lucrih

Literati Anglers

Corey Ford has become one of literature's most aggressive fishermen—ranging from salmon in the Columbia to shotgun harpooning in Alaska. Every time he sells a magazine piece—which is increasingly frequent—he goes on a shopping spurge for reels, rods and flies. Equipment that once filled a closet in his New Hampshire retreat now fills a room. Other rabid fishermen among the literati include Rex Beach, Irvin Cobb,



Courtney Ryley Cooper, Ben Ames Williams, Ernest Hemingway, Peter B. Kyne, John Taintor Foote and Bud Kelland

Cartoonists are almost invariably disciples of Izaak Walton. Briggs, Webster, Enright, Tad Goldberg, Herb Roth of the Mentor, as well as Rogers MacCauley, Rushnell and Homer Davenport of the oldtimers, took advantage of every opportunity to get away from things and fish. Thomas Nast was also a devout caster.

Edward Orleans is the pseudonym for Brian Donlevy, writer who syndicated sermonettes for newspapers. Wheeler was once editor of Everybody's during its flourish. While his ideas are quite original, he pursues the path blazed by Dr. Frank Crane. Orleans seems the only person successfully to fill the shoes since Crane's passing. Dr. Crane was a journalistic phenomenon of his period. A struggling Methodist preacher, he saw the great and once he might command, could be reach them daily, with a syndicated capsule sermon.

Just An Ad

Dr. Crane liked newspaper folk and his influence among the guild was quietly productive of excellent results. He played poker with them and got a big check game shucked down so nobody could lose more than a quarter an evening. He also, in miraculous manner, bolstered a hard drinking crew of hard liquor drinkers to consume nothing but beer at the weekly session. How he did it no one knows, but he did and not one of the gang would think of missing that Saturday night game.

I crossed her path this afternoon in the East 50's as she stepped from a taxi at her door. She wore a tambourine cap of heavy plush and pajamas of gray broadcloth edged with fur, pertly reminiscent of Lucienne Boyer as she sauntered into a fashionable tobacco shop. Through the windows photographers snapped their cameras inside. That's the way things are these days. Get all excited and find out it's just an ad.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

Avis, threatened by Madge, promises to behave herself on pain of being locked in her room. The ceremony begins and Mary and Noel meet at the altar.

FORTUNATELY Avis herself had put into my hand the weapon I had just used to compel her obedience. When I had first spoken of locking the door on her hours before, she had shown such terror that I knew she was a victim of claustrophobia, so I was not surprised when she started toward me with outstretched hands, crying:

"Don't—don't do that! I'll come down. You've beaten me; but don't lock me up."

"See that you behave yourself then," Lillian said grimly as she took the girl gently but firmly by the arm and headed her toward the door. "Just remember that Im going to have my eyes on you every second, and if you dare to pull anything, I'll whistle you up here and lock the door on you before you have time to breathe. But if you behave yourself, nobody will guess anything save that you are the most striking looking girl at the wedding."

HUMORING AVIS

"And that's no lie," she said in burlesque intonation, as she gave Avis what she calls "the once and twice over." "Just live up to your looks, my good girl, and you'll enjoy yourself hugely, I'll predict."

"Better tell your mother and Mr. Veritzen now why you are not going to be a bride's maid," Lillian counseled, "then they will not be looking for you in the procession."

"All right," Avis said, and as I went to the front of the room to speak to the pianist, I heard a voluble but low-toned explanation of the impossibility of wearing the bridesmaid's gown picked out for her.

"My foolish, fastidious darling," Mrs. Arlen fatuously murmured, and Philip Veritzen added a compliment upon the becomingness of the green and silver gown. Both of the older people were too schooled in the social nuances to have treated her displacement in any other than a casual manner, and as I gave the signal to the pianist I felt that one more danger to the success of the wedding arrangements had been passed.

THE CEREMONY BEGINS

Our small orchestra had been playing softly while Bob, with William and Henry assisting him, had been seating the guests in the chairs on either side of the aisle flanked with roses. Just before my signal to the pianist, the boys walked down to the front of the room drawing broad white ribbons along either side of the aisle, fastening them to the front standard of flowers, then stepping to one side of the improvised altar.

The music of the orchestra stopped and the first familiar strains of the Lohengrin wedding march came from the piano. The Reverend Mr. Summers—who, I reflected whimsically did not know how nearly he had been dragged out of bed to perform this ceremony nearly twenty hours before—took his place in front of the altar and from a side door Noel and Ronald came to join him.

A HARASSED BRIDEGROOM

Noel was pale, and his face was set in lines of anxiety. He looked like anything but a jubilant bridegroom, and I had a sudden feeling of irritation against him in spite of my knowledge of the secret fear which had set his face in those lines. But I felt that I could not bear the interpretation which Avis Arlen would put upon that strained look. Her vanity would interpret it as reluctance to go through the ceremony with Mary, in spite of the humiliating truths Noel had spoken to her the night before.

Ronald was as flushed as Noel was pale, and he was almost as harassed looking. I knew that he was saying to himself "ring, ring, ring," and that he had a very lively fear of forgetting the ring in the ceremony at which he was to produce it.

But both faces lost their anxiety as down the stairs, with a beautiful movement, came the bridal wedding procession. Ronald's eyes rested for a second with brotherly approval upon his two handsome pages, Carolyn, leading the procession, and then his face broke into beaming pleasure at the sight of Marion behind her in her rose-colored gown.

With starry eyes searching through her veil for Noel's eyes, Mary was an exquisite vision and as she came closer and her eyes found Noel's, I did not wonder at the radiance that came into the boy's face, or at the smile with which he welcomed her.

"Dearly beloved!"—he sonorous voice of the clergyman began intoning the impressive old service, and with eyes and ears divided between the bridal pair and Avis Arlen, who sat directly across from me, I followed the words of the service feverishly. At the words, "If any person can show just cause," I fixed my eyes goes fearfully to Avis Arlen's face, and, in the old wives' phraseology, "the night mare left them" as I saw her stalk upward, color in her cheeks.

GOLDEN PUMPKIN OF TRADITIONAL THANKSGIVING FEAST IN NEW GUISES

Lapin Looks to Luxurious Summer Ermine

SILKY, close-napped lapin in a tawny beige-brown with darker brown striping exactly like that of summer ermine, is new this season. Striping helps emphasize the unusual treatment of pelts in this swagger coat—it outlines the youthful, round yoke on the shoulders, the horizontal marking on the sleeves as against the vertical marking on the coat itself. And so careful is the detail that you will notice the patch pocket's stripes differ in position from the coat's stripes. You may have a long, "dachshund" muff instead of the barrel muff shown, each with a zipper-ed compartment. The interesting ascot of heavy brown and white mossy crepe is part of the ensemble, matching the lining of the coat. A budget and fashion find, of course.

By MARION MARTIN

PATTERN 0188

Here is a house frock, every line of which has been thought out carefully to make a slenderizing dress for more matronly figure. Notice how the flattering surplice closing is emphasized by chic buttons and how the point below the waist gives that nice slim look to the hips. And don't you like the gracefully short sleeves? They are cut full enough to permit freedom of action when you are zipping about your housewifely duties. The skirt boasts a perky kick pleat for the same purpose.

Pattern 0188 may be ordered only in sizes 34, 36, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric.

Mail Wedding Cards Early

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

When is it proper to send wedding invitations? C.

Formal engraved wedding invitations are sent out at least three weeks before the date set for the wedding, and sometimes, if the wedding is to be a large wedding

In a socially-busy season of the year, they are mailed a month before the date of the wedding. Informal invitations, written notes, are usually mailed two weeks or ten days before the date of the wedding

Pumpkinmallow Pie Choice Dessert

By Martha Lee

From Martha Lee's Wednesday Morning Broadcast Over Station WAAB.

NOVEMBER is the time for new pumpkin recipes, when the housewife, and nearly everyone else becomes obsessed by the thought of pumpkin pies, pumpkin tarts, or any pastry in which the golden fruit of the pumpkin is offered to be eaten.

While perhaps there is nothing better than the well made, old-fashioned pumpkin pie, many women like to know some new ways of making the historic Thanksgiving dessert, so they can have it offered during the pumpkin season. Here are some new suggestions

CARAMEL PUMPKIN PIE OR TARTS

1¼ cups cooked pumpkin
1-3 cup sugar
Few grains nutmeg
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon ginger
½ teaspoon salt
3 eggs, beaten
2-3 cup sugar
1½ cups hot milk

Combine the pumpkin, 1-3 cup sugar and seasonings in top of the double boiler and heat. Add three beaten eggs. Caramelize two-thirds cup sugar, then dissolve in the hot milk and add to the pumpkin. Pour into pastry-lined pie tin or tart shells. Bake in hot, 450 deg. F. oven for 10 minutes, then 325 deg. F. for 30 minutes, or until knife comes out clean. Serve topped with whipped cream if desired. One pie or eight to ten tarts.

PUMPKINMALLOW PIE

2 cups cooked pumpkin
⅔ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1¼ teaspoons ginger
3 eggs, beaten
1¼ cups hot milk
16 marshmallows

Mix the pumpkin, sugar, salt, cinnamon and ginger in top of double boiler and heat until sugar is dissolved. Add three beaten eggs and one and one-half cups hot milk. Cut the marshmallows in quarters and spread in bottom of a pastry lined pie tin. Pour hot pumpkin mixture over and bake, having oven at 425 deg. F. for five minutes, then at 325 deg. F. for thirty to thirty-five minutes or until knife comes out clean. One pie.

BRAZILIAN PUMPKIN TARTS

1½ cups cooked pumpkin
⅔ cup maple sugar
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon ginger
2 eggs, beaten
1¼ cups hot milk
⅔ cup chopped Brazil-nuts

Heat the pumpkin, maple sugar, salt, cinnamon and ginger in top of double boiler. Add two beaten eggs and the hot milk and nuts. Pour into pastry-lined tart tins and bake, 450 deg. F. for five to ten minutes, 325 deg. F., until knife comes out clean. Eight to ten tarts

Little Woman, What Now?

There is a new one for Mr. Ripley! A sweater-dress for the recently exhibited lingerie which does not require tubbing.

The garment is made of a kind of paper, which is reputed to be perfectly comfortable to wear, and it is advocated that the garment be worn once, and destroyed.

In this day of time saving, labor saving, effort saving, it is difficult to tell whether this garment will or will not be adopted.

Jersey Important

Jerseys have been a high fashion lining for the last few seasons. Now its acceptance is expected to spread so that everyone may know the charmness and great comfort of it. Light weight woolen linings are also smart.

Nourishment for Skin of Hands

By Juliet Shelby

NIPPY DAYS bring chapped skin. That is the lot of women whose skin is lacking in natural oils, unless, of course, they use a protective lotion or cream.

Roughened, red hands can be so easily circumvented if you would only use a preventive lotion after putting your hands in water and before going out of doors. Make it a habit to have a bottle of lotion handy on your bathroom or kitchen shelf, or in your office drawer. Shake a few drops in the palm of your hand and massage it into your skin quickly. That's all it takes to keep the skin velvety smooth and white.

This lotion is manufactured by a drug house, not a cosmetic house, and for that reason (so they tell me), the price is lower than for similar concoctions. Be that as it may, I do know it is very reasonable and very effective.

The formula is a nourishing, soothing one and it prevents chapping if you are loyal to it. Some women I know swear by it for a good powder base, and it serves as a protection against cold weather as well.

If you wish to learn the name of this hand lotion and where it can be bought, phone Miss Sheiby, Liberty 4000. If you prefer writing for this information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Juliet Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Perfect Foils For Loveliness

Relative Merits of Two Systems in Duplicate

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

The following deal provided an amusing contrast in outcome when it arrived at the head table of a recent duplicate game. The number of tables being even, the boards were being played simultaneously at these two tables, and after each round the North-South pairs were comparing scores.

At the head table the East-West pair announced that they were playing "Sims."

East, Dealer
Neither side vulnerable.

	♠A6 ♡A83 ◇Q5 ♣AKJ875
♠J742 ♡Q106 ◇A184 ♣Q9	North West East South	♠KQ1093 ♡1954 ◇963 ♣6
	♠85 ♡K72 ◇K1072 ♣1043

(1) The standard third hand "protective" bid, which conventionally may or may not show a club suit and is designed primarily to give the dealer a chance to reconsider his pass, which may have been made under the system on values that would warrant an opening bid under other systems.

(2) A very fine bid in an awkward situation. If North doubles and bids notrump, he will probably crowd the bidding up to three notrump, whatever South may hold. North certainly needs some assistance from South to go game, and North would like to give South an opportunity to make a free bid and thus to indicate whether he has any bidding values. Under other circumstances the overcall in the opponents' suit would be construed as the most drastic of all forcing bids, but against the conventional third hand club bid North's overcall, he decided, would be taken by South to show simply great length and strength in the club suit.

(3) East's hand is a little scaly to bid at the level of two. The actual player considered it best to await developments.

(4) The strong club support and the two red Kings obviously warrant a strong positive bid.

Three notrump was a lay-down against any opening. West opened a spade and thus held declarer to three-odd. Any other opening would have permitted South to establish at least one diamond trick and to make at least four-odd.

At the "relay" table the East-West pair announced that they were playing the Culbertson system. The bidding proceeded

East	South	West	North
Pass	Pass	1♠ (1)	2♣ (2)
Pass (3)	2 NT (4)	Pass	3 NT
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) Having passed originally East feels justified in showing his spade suit at the level of one.

(2) After South's assist in clubs West has to dismiss any hope that he and his partner together hold a club stopper. If North-South have a solid club suit and East has no better than a second-round bid there is little prospect of preventing North-South from making three no trump. At the same time the West hand appears to limit the loss at four spades to two tricks, which will be less than the value of the adverse game. Being prepared to go to four spades as a save," West jumped at once to that contract as the best hope of escaping a double.

While West's hopes was not fulfilled the loss at four spades was no more than he had anticipated. The contract was set two tricks. This "save" proved to be a smart stop score for the board.

Neither a single deal of this sort nor even a large number of like deals, can be taken as indicating the relative merits of the two systems employed by the different East-West pairs. But this hand at least provides an amusing example of the "boomerang" that a protective bid can turn out to be.

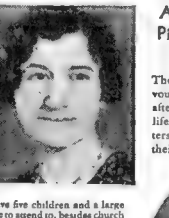
98 out of 100 Women Report Benefit
After Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
They take it when they are nervous and rundown, before and after childbirth, and at middle life. They give it to their daughters and they recommend it to their neighbors.



"I have five children and a large house to attend to, besides church affairs. Last summer I was weak and rundown, and suffered so with my back. Six bottles of the Vegetable Compound helped me wonderfully. I do all my work now, sew for others and have no backache.—Mrs. G. M. Kotel, 8558 N. Allegheny Ave., Portland, Oregon.

"After my baby was born I was weak and tired so I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up. I feel well and strong now and have good color.—Mrs. O. M. Conley, Carlisle, Ky.

Many women find it more convenient to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets. Chocolate coated, are packed in purse size bottles. Take these tablets a few days before your period to relieve pain and discomfort. Take them regularly all the month and you should suffer less and less, because they act upon the cause of your trouble and help to prevent future disturbances. Small size 50¢.

"I cannot praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Tablets enough for the way they have helped me. I always suffered a great deal of pain each month. I felt tired and sick all the time. In the morning I was dizzy and faint. Usually I had to stay in bed a day, sometimes only half a day. A friend of mine told me about these Tablets and they helped me very much. Now I feel full of pep."—Mrs. M. Grieg, 1001 E. Clay Street, Shamokin, Pa.

Stage Treat for Children

SATURDAY WILL BRING JOY TO the hearts of the very young set when Pocohontas, an Indian Legend, will be given at the Repertory theater by the Children's Theater of New York, Clare Tree Major, director. These plays for children are among the most delightful events of the winter and lay a fine foundation for the appreciation of the theater and the drama in their adolescence . . . The reason for the rise and fall of so many little theater movements in the adult groups is because of a lack of understanding of the theater, what its object is in contemporary life, its true value as history and the proper receptive spirit toward plays. Among the groups of well-meaning sponsors who want to bring GOOD plays to Boston, there is a sad lack of understanding and knowledge as to what IS a good play. There can be nothing of more lasting pleasure in life than a foundation toward the enjoyment of the theater.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

If the Townsend old age pension goes through everybody past 60 will get $200 a month, providing he promises to lead an upright life, quits his job and agrees to spend the dole within 30 days.

Think of the possibilities:

Real estators selling millions of acres to be devoted to horseshoe pitching!

Bridge table manufacturers working day and night!

Drug stores selling hair dye hand over fist!

And perhaps all the rocking chairs can be hooked up to generate enough power to operate all the revolving doors in America.

Thousands made from a few shares of arch supporter stock!

And as for promising to lead an upright life—what other kind of life is there to lead after you're sixty?

"As for me," muttered Genevieve the kitchen cynic, "I'd be more sympathetic toward the younger generation if it generated less noise."

Gals who guzzle beer and rye
Just can't keep their powder dry
So with quarts and quarts of tears
The buxom babies salt their beers.

Dear Aunt Bella:

Don't you think Mussolini's attitude toward the practice of kissing in public places is a good thing?

Club Woman

Ans.—I guess so, lady. I never did see why anybody need waste time practicing.

Aunt ("Pardon-my-Yawn") Bella.

There are times and there are places
When and where the rich man faces
Irritations you and I will never feel.
While we all on cold park benches
They, too, have their aches and wrenches
As they nibble sirloin steaks and breaded veal.
They have woes and they have troubles
Shattered dreams and busted bubbles,
Aching hearts and high-blood pressure—much too high
Itemize their hopes and fears, sir,
And will drive you soon to tears, sir—
Pardon us . . . we can't go on
. . . we gotta cry.
Oh-o-o-o-o-o-o-o-o.

We're glad we're not rich like the Astors;
The Astors and Vanderbilts, too!
The Morgans, the Whitneys,
With all of their fitness,
Are worse off than me and than you. Boo-Hoo!

It would be better if somebody could find a way to make war impractical.

Transition of a Killer Dempsey Turns Parent Walsh on Football ↑ ↓ Baseball Bars Baker 'Gansett Cuts Another Slice of Fruit Cake

By AUSTEN LAKE

JACK DEMPSEY, ATTENDED by a pair of all-day sleep-sitters who ducked their double chins and gassed broodingly as I entered the room, sprawled on his bed in a loose attitude of ease, showing a peep of hairy shanks beneath a satin dressing gown of costly material.

Austen Lake

The old mauler, whom we like to call fistiania's deathless immortal, was pining for his recently born baby, a mewling lump of a three-months girl weighing 15 pounds.

He would, he said, quit the honky tonk jumps, the prowling of muddle puddle towns and devote his gathering years to being a father. He would forsake the beloved stench of rubbing liniments and ringside body odors to be near the little human package which whimpered and squeeked in her nursery basket.

All the pomp and circumstance that wealth could buy, said the old killer massaging his hammer fists which had beaten half a hundred men almost to death, would be Joan Dempsey's—education, governesses, travel, finishing school and the cream of society.

The former sand hog, dock walloper, mine borer, tramp and supreme glove fighter, told how he had bought a pension for life. His money worries were over. The cloying sweets of public favor were stale in his mouth.

Henceforth he would dabble in business, his cafe, his investments, his promotions—happy that his seed had flourished.

All the ancient savagery that had made him the most ferocious punisher of the ring had dimmed to the mellowed patience of a country grocer and he, who had whipped the world's biggest bullies, was now made into a defenseless, handcuffed novice by an infant the size of a child's doll.

The all-day sleep-sitters, his male nurses who fend off moochers, bar-flies and the unending flow of chiselers who come to squeese a few dollars, continued to squat like human bullfrogs, unblinking as wax figures—the modern gnomes in the court of a latter day prince.

IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN MY contension that college football players and not their coaches should receive credit or blame for games won and lost and that the coaches who sometimes go around taking their bows and lending their names to advertising testimonials, are often guilty of misrepresentation.

Hence I was pleased to hear Adam Walsh, the sandy haired, trim looking line coach at Harvard, get up before the Boston Advertising hunchers and say that football "systems" were different labels for the same thing, and that the raw-boned, red-blooded and limber-legged and bull-bodied quality of the material made systems go or fail, according to which side had it at the moment.

This amounts to a confession. I have long felt that in this later day one coach's methods of teaching the football alphabet is as good as another's. I would say that Eddie Casey, with Princeton's private army of huskies, would have the same measure of success as Frits Crisler now enjoys.

"Systems" grow in proportion to a coach's success. We have not been hearing anything about the old Harvard system, as it was called in Haughton's day, though I dare say there is as much refined detail and correct teaching going on at Cambridge now as then.

In the last 15 years, colleges outside of New England have fished our schoolboys streams pretty dry, and the hairy-chested talent that used to go to Harvard, Dartmouth and Yale is turning up at Duke, Temple, Villanova, Manhattan, Fordham and points West.

The best fishermen have the best system.

THERE IS A COMIC MIXTURE in the tragedy of Roger E. Baker, the Boston cafe proprietor who turned baseball archangel last year and is now under State glass accused of misappropriation

Organized minor league baseball has just put him on the ineligible list, charging him with syndicate baseball and financing all eight clubs in the Northeastern League.

This comes rather late, because Baker confessed to having mortgages on all these clubs early last season and defied organized baseball to do anything about it, lest 200 ball players be thrown out of work.

So, baseball sat coolly until the season closed, and Baker was suddenly bagged by the civil authorities.

There he sits now, deposed of something that has already been stripped away, and made ineligible to preside over a league's affairs which, by his geographical location, he cannot control anyway.

THE NARRAGANSETT RACE TRACK, with its policies to squeese the public cow dry, has discovered that Armistice Day is a holiday. So, wishing to milk out another pailful of dollars, it has wheedled an extension of racing time out of an obliging Rhode Island commission.

This is the second extension allowed by Rhode Island, on the theory that while the public is willing to give it, it is not sinful for the state and track to collaborate in getting it.

I suspect that Mr. Walter O'Hara, the 'Gansett proprietor, realizes that the public cow will suddenly stop giving down and retire sometime soon with its udders sore from being yanked.

I place the life of horse racing in New England at three years, possibly less, before the community suddenly yells outrage and forces the pretty horse tracks with their landscaped scenery to go back to the primitive jungles whence they sprung.

FUCHS AS N. L. HEAD RUMOR IS REVIVED

New York, Nov. 7 (US)—As National League club owners head for New York today to discuss a successor to John Heydler, their retiring president, the rumor that Judge Emil E. Fuchs will be offered the post has been revived.

Fuchs, former New York City magistrate, says he is in no position to consider such an offer at this time. From Boston, where he has been active in the campaign of James M. Curley for the governorship of Massachusetts, he denies that he contemplates retirement from the presidency of the Boston Braves, a National League club.

CURLEY PARTNER

Curley and Fuchs are associated in a Boston law firm and he is engaged with the problem of refinancing the Boston club after a season in which he withstood strong competition from the Boston American League club.

Under the circumstances, it would be impossible for Fuchs to accept the National League presidency at this time. He would first be obliged to dispose of his holdings in the Boston club. That might entail a sacrifice, if such disposal had to be made this winter. Judge Fuchs prefers to continue as a club president. He bought into the Boston club in 1923 and became president after the death of Christy Mathewson in 1925.

From unofficial expressions of several club owners, Ford Frick is favored over all others who have been named to succeed Heydler. Frick does not regard himself as a candidate inasmuch as he has made no canvass of the club owners, but will accept if the post is offered to him. At least two club presidents have expressed their preference for him. Names added to the growing list of eligibles were those of James J. Tierney, secretary of the New York club, and Bobby Quinn, business manager of the Brooklyn club.

NUGENT ARRIVES

Gerald Nugent, president of the Philadelphia club, is among the first of the club owners to arrive from other cities. Others who will be here tonight or early tomorrow are Judge Fuchs, William Benswanger, president of the Pittsburgh club; Powel E. Crosley, president of the Cincinnati club; Sam Breadon, president, and Branch Rickey, vice-president of the Chicago club. The New York and Brooklyn clubs will be represented by their presidents, Charles A. Stoneham and Stephen McKeever.

The magnates will go into session tomorrow noon at National League headquarters in Rockefeller Center. It is possible that the election of a new president may be deferred until the annual meeting here on Dec. 11.

Heydler, the retiring executive, plans a long vacation trip after the Christmas holidays, with Mexico as one of his objectives.

ARMY IS READY FOR CRIMSON

West Point, Nov 7—Army's football team will wind up its strenuous preparation for the Harvard game this afternoon. Only a light workout is on tap for tomorrow. Then the eleven will entrain for the Bay State.

Curtis Edwards, right end, is the only player who is not likely to be in condition to face the Crimson Jack Buckler is fit again.

The first string backfield includes Buckler at left half, King at quarterback, Grove at right half and Joe Stancook at full.

The coaches were pleased with the work of Shuler at end against Illinois, as well as the playing of Stromberg, who replaced Edwards when the latter was hurt.

Stromberg will see action in the Harvard game.

Rain Halts Ruth on Japs' Plea

By International News Service

Hakodaid, Japan, Nov. 7—Tens of thousands of Japanese baseball fans were disappointed to see Babe Ruth hit one of his world-famed home runs today that they persuaded the visiting American baseball star to postpone a scheduled game between American and Japanese all-star teams.

The seeming paradox was the result of the Hakodate citizens' fear that a prevailing rain would hinder the Babe in his circuit clout efforts. The Babe at first had insisted on playing the scheduled game despite the rain, but finally gave in at the fans' request.

On Saturday Ruth, Connie Mack, veteran Philadelphia manager, and others of the visiting American team will appear on an international radio broadcast program to be relayed to the United States.

Texas Jack Set to Ride Stadium Range

Texas Jack Buckler practices a bit on changing direction, as he plans to do and help Army baffle Harvard at the Stadium on Saturday. Buckler gave a brilliant grid exhibition against Yale, and is the man the Crimson fears this week.

Parquette to Get Chance Saturday

Tiny Billy Parquette, the 135-pound Salem mite, who is mistaken by the Harvard mascot more often than he's recognized as one of the most dangerous offensive threats on the Crimson squad, will get his chance against Army.

Harvard will break out its package of dynamite against the Kaydets in a last attempt to scare up an offensive punch. The lack of an accurate passer has cost the Crimson many a scoring chance this season.

Parquette was the honor of being Harvard's best passer without a contest.

But so far Billy's activity has been limited to a few seconds at the tail end of the Brown game.

The coaches found risking Parquette's fragile frame against [illegible] but they will throw caution to the winds. The Salem youngster has fooled everyone, especially the coaches. Not once in two and a half months of scrimmaging at Soldiers Field has he received a single injury. That hardiness may carry him through a rugged contest with the Kaydets.

Flypaper Aids Kase in Grid Findings

Ace Picker Likes Colgate, Penn and Michigan

By Max Kase

There's a splash of the gypsy to the colorful makeup of the professor. This week I stray from my familiar football pastures to new and untravelled trails for the Saturday nominations.

But shucks! A bit of pioneering fails to daunt the dauntless professor. It shouldn't, not with my unique and simple method of selection and detection.

For this week's picks, the professor equipped himself with a supply of gummy, sticky flypaper and writing paper of a rich lavender hue. The professor is particular, sensitive to lavender.

Then, the names of the rivals who meet on the turf-torn fields on Saturday, are written on individual sheets. The paper is thrown high in the air and those which stick to the Tanglefoot in landing are picked as the Saturday winners. Quite simple.

The meeting having been called to order, the professor reports as follows:

YALE-GEORGIA. The Crackers have beaten Eli the last four times they met. But this is a different Yale team just as much as this is a different Georgia squad. Yale will break the spell this week-end.

TULANE - COLGATE. Andy Kerr's Red Raiders will avenge the licking they took from the southerners last year. Not even the sterling play of little "Monk" Simmons of Tulane can overcome the uncanny trickiness of Kerr. Colgate will lather the Green Wave.

PENN STATE - PENN. The Quakers are coming along fast after a slow start. One vote for Penn.

MICHIGAN STATE-SYRACUSE. A tough 'un. But the Tanglefoot reached out and clutched Syracuse. So the Orange will continue in the ranks of the unbeaten.

VILLANOVA - SOUTH CAROLINA. The Wildcats will claw once more. Both clubs have had disappointing seasons. Harry Stuhldreher will be pleased with the professor's findings.

MICHIGAN - WISCONSIN. A wed for Michigan if only because they have been less the worse.

NAVY - NOTRE DAME. The Navy'll take them over. The Irish took a drubbing from the Panthers and it'll be tough for them to come back within a week.

ARMY-HARVARD. Jack Buckler and his gang will make things miserable, once again, for the boys from Cambridge.

TUFTS - MIDDLEBURY. I've learned something. A $2 win ticket on Tufts, pliz, my frans.

NORTHEASTERN - MASS STATE. Not even that surprising party of State against Amherst can change my findings. It'll be Northeastern.

BROWN-COLUMBIA. Sad Loss Little will be able to relax into a smile. It'll be Columbia.

N. Y. U.-CITY COLLEGE. Benny Friedman's boys are not yet ready for this kind of opposition. The wilting Violets will revive under such misdirection.

Aides Fired One By One, Casey Going Next

By Dave Egan

It is not cricket, I'm quite sure, for an athletic association to announce in the final phases of a season that the head football coach would not be retained at the end of the season.

But a newspaper is not an athletic association, and it is said, on good authority, that a newspaper is expected to dispense news to its readers.

So you may as well know, in advance of official confirmation from the Harvard Athletic Association, that Eddie Casey, after four stormy and disappointing years, will not be retained in any capacity when this season is a matter of history.

"Aha," I hear the Messrs. Bingham and Clark and Ryan and all their yes-men and nodmen of the H. A. A. say, "that scandal-monger Egan is groping in the dark once more, making wild guesses and flailing around with empty words. We shall prepare an immediate statement for the press, repudiating him and his words."

Your devoted correspondent will gladly admit that Casey's dismissal is merely a rumor, and will continue to be so until it is officially confirmed by the Harvard Athletic Association.

BUT THE RUMOR WILL BE CONFIRMED, and my only disappointment is that some official of the H. A. A. will not place a small wager with me on the matter.

These rumors have not come from Izzy the Gonniff or Subway Sadie. They have come from a powerful, protesting group of Harvard Alumni, a body of Boston and New York graduates who do not think that Eddie Casey has been given a fair shake.

When Casey took the varsity position, after brilliant success with the freshmen, he immediately surrounded himself with tried and true assistants who knew the Casey system almost as well as the young master himself.

Cleary, Sampson, Bond, They're All Gone

He collected Arthur Sampson, a brilliant football strategist; Walter Cleary, "Swede" Nelson and Eddie Bradford to assist him in moulding a team.

He hired Johnny Donovan to coach the junior varsity line, as assistant to Jimmy Knox. He named Rufe Bond, now a prominent lawyer, as freshman coach with Charlie Bradford as his aide-de-camp.

Slowly but inexorably, the ground was chopped from beneath Casey's feet, despite the fact that in his first season as head coach, he had won every game except the annual classic with Yale, when little Albie Booth pumped a field goal home for a 3 to 0 Yale victory.

Since then, Cleary, Sampson, the Bradford twins, Rufe Bond, and Johnny Donovan have been politely requested to forward their resignations.

Today, Casey stands alone, the solitary survivor of a ruthless campaign which will discredit him after this season is over.

When Casey accepted the job, he made the announcement that he wanted the freshmen and the junior varsity coached in his style of play, so that they would grow up in it, and would not come up to the varsity as perfect strangers to the formations and assignments. That's why he wanted Bond as freshman coach.

The situation of this day and date is a sorry example of what a meddlesome Athletic Association with a fish-wife complex can do to a system which has been tried and found successful over a long period of years.

Casey's line coach is Adam Walsh of Notre Dame, who has never coached a six-man line, and has made the Harvard line look so sturdy this season by using seven men defensively.

When Walsh coached at Yale, the Elis were a lot of fellows named Joe when it came to stopping a pass down the middle.

Harvard's weakness all season has been its defense against passes, simply because an unfair burden has been placed on the backs.

Fesler to Get Job; if Not, Adam Walsh

The Harvard ends are coached by Wesley Fesler, a nice boy from Ohio State, and the backfield is coached by Myles Lane, who is steeped in the Hawley system. Fesler was hired after Athletic Director Bingham heard him in a pretty speech which advocated "giving the game back to the boys."

The boys have got almost all of it back in the past three weeks—from Holy Cross, Dartmouth and Princeton. They will be given the rest of it right between the eyes next Saturday, when the Army Mule kicks them around a bit more.

Next to Army is the varsity a disorganized outfit, but the confusion extends right down through the system. Jimmy Knox, coach of the seconds, uses any type of offense which may happen to pop into his graying head.

And Cliff Gallagher of Oklahoma A. & M., who was installed by Bingham as freshman coach after Bond was discharged, teaches his young charges Notre Dame formations and Notre Dame football.

If Mr. Bingham does not end his career at Harvard in the meanwhile, either Wes Fesler or Adam Walsh will be the next Harvard head coach, with the emphasis on Fesler at the present time.

It is a right pretty mess.

(Tomorrow, Dave Egan will go into further details and give further authentic inside information about the state of affairs in Harvard football. What's wrong with Harvard? You'll find the answer.)

ROBINSON CRUSOE, IN SIXTH RACE, WILSON'S BEST BET

INA GREENOCK LOOKS BEST IN OPENER

teenth of the sixth race here tomorrow afternoon.

Ina Greenock, Royal Link, Jake Blieden

FIFTH RACE—$600; claiming; two-year-olds; 4½ furlongs.

Ina Greenock	110	Pretty Boll	108
Royal Link	110	Chortle	105
Tachyscope	105	Dancing Lady	113
Unknown Soldier	111	Maudening	105
Bonnie Queen	110	Ina Macain	108
Grandpas Boy	113	Also eligible:
Jerome B	110	Bank Holiday	108

CIVIL WAR has only to hug the inner rail in ordered to be the first to catch the judges eyes. The son of Wise Counsellor has been tearing to the outside fence in recent efforts, but Trainer Silver may have corrected this bad habit. CHORTLE has been freshened up slightly and should go well. HOME LOAN looks as good as anything else for the show award.

MACHILLA, SPOILT BEAUTY, PASS

FOURTH RACE—$600; claiming; three-year-olds and up; 6 furlongs.

Machilla	110	Spoilt Beauty	110
Fashman	110	Butter Beans	110
Blue Emperor	110	Pass	112
Would Dare	110	Machilla	114
Spoilt Beauty	107

MACHILLA is entitled to a three-year call in two excellent races at the meeting. PASS will be dangerous in the event of mud.

HER GOLD, JUDGE JUDY, FINALIST

Judge Judy	107	Her Gold	108
Finalist	108	Butter Beans	110
Ad Hominem	112	Pass	112
Dark Mission	112	Step Gap	112
Corona Rose	107	Dreamwood	104

Under the weight arrangements, I'm forced to string along with HE HOLD. The latter turned in a brilliant victory about ten days back. JUDGE JUDY looms as the one to watch despite his heavy package of 117 pounds. FINALIST is dropping down a bit and may share in the spoils.

ROBINSON CRUSOE, FINGAL, TUFFY G.

SIXTH RACE—$1000; claiming; three-year-olds and up; one and one-sixteenth miles.

Fingal	111	Mrs. Barker	110
Dogwood	110	Tuffy G.	110
Nancy C	110	Robinson Crusoe	111
Tea	110	Harky	110
Sound Money	110	Glamay	110
Horatio Hunt	110

ROBINSON CRUSOE is meeting little more than he drubbed in New York triumphs. Looks like a queen of intelligent handling. FINGAL, a galloping winner of a few days back, shapes up best of the others. TUFFY G., an honest sort looms as good as anything else for the minor award.

GLORITINE, NANCY C., BILLOWY WAVE

SEVENTH RACE—$800; claiming; three-year-olds and up; one and one-sixteenth miles.

Tapster	108	Bako	105
Dustpuffer	110	Light Breeze	109
Gloritine	111	Billowy Wave	104
Mr. Topher	107	Boy Crazy	110
Nancy C.	103	Stepping In	101

This is the toughest race of the day. My advice is to go slow on the wagering. My figures call the finish GLORITONE, NANCY C and BILLOWY WAVE.

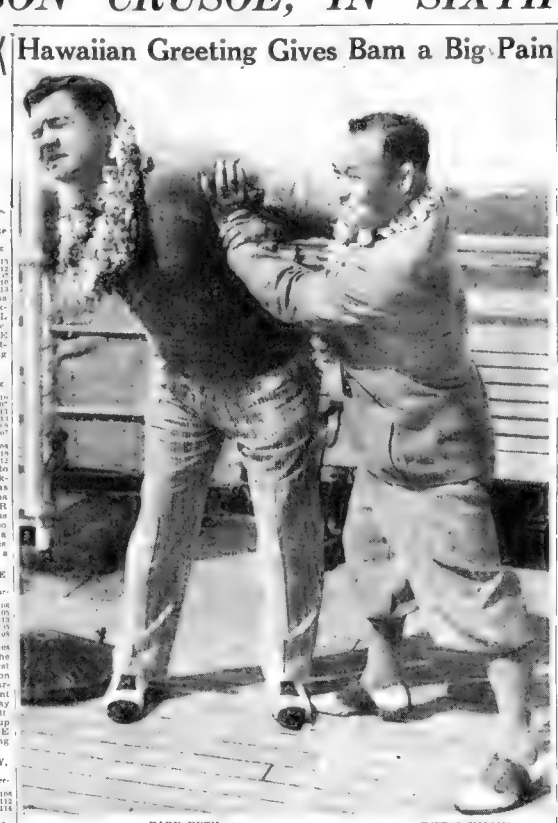
Hawaiian Greeting Gives Bam a Big Pain



BABE RUTH

TSUTSO HIGAMI

Perhaps this isn't the usual Hawaiian greeting, but anyhow it gave Ruth a great big pain, as his expression shows. Higami, noted teacher of jiu-jitsu, tried a few of his pet holds on the Bam as the latter arrived at the island to show folks there how he hits home runs. Friedman vs. Mal Stevens

By Associated Press

Ann Arbor, Mich.—Bill Renner of Michigan a star passer, wasn't able to play against Minnesota Saturday, but was given a job carrying one of the lineman's stakes. Minnesota scored so often in the second half Renner returned his injured leg hurrying up and down the field.

Princeton, N. J.—A few words from Coach Fritz Crisler apparently get great results from the Princeton squad. He reproached the reserves for lacking scoring punch and they went out to make eight touchdowns yesterday against the freshman team that hadn't been scored on in three regular games.

New York—Benny Friedman and Mal Stevens get their first chance this week to settle their differences on the football field. A few seasons back Friedman was backfield coach under Stevens at Yale, and they couldn't agree at all on what style of attack to use. Saturday, Benny will send his City College team, featuring his flashy passing style, against New York University, coached by Stevens.

Evanston, Ill.—The Northwestern victors has made a great difference to the many followers. After the Wildcats victory over Wisconsin last week, the ticket sale for the Illinois game picked up so that 40,000 are expected to attend Saturday.

Villanova, Pa.—The home fans still are looking for a victory in the Villanova-South Carolina series. Two years ago the Southerners won here 7-6, and last year the main liners went to Columbia, S. C., to gain a 15-6 victory. They meet here this week.

EKKY PRESSED TO WIN $5000 STAKE RACE

Belmont Park N. Y., Nov. 7 (US Exp.)—Jockey C. V. Whitney's hands [illegible] came back in all his riding [illegible] and added more dignity to the royal [illegible] when he raced home [illegible] a half victory on the $5000 added Whitney gold cup here.

This event was the feature of the united hunts meeting, and it was proper that the gallant six-year-old son of Pennant triumphed.

The victory brought Ekky's total winnings to about $198,650, which behind Sun Beau's record of $376,741.

Under a brilliant ride by Sonny Workman Equip se came from behind in the gruelling mile and a quarter over the [illegible] course to win Fairus Mr. Khayvam at the three-quarters and went on to defeat Belair stud's Fairoso 1932 Preakness champion, by a length and a half.

Ekky, toting top weight of 128 pounds through the sloppy going however, did not win like the champion of old.

Workman, after holding him in restraint for the first part of the race, was forced to keep the Whitney color-bearer under hard urging throughout the stretch run and Ekky won, ridden out.

Newburyport and Salem showed their iron man qualities today hitting at Bertram Field, Salem. Both played last Saturday, Salem slamming Bangor, Me., and Newburyport holding favored Marblehead to a scoreless tie. Newburyport plays Saugus the coming Saturday, while Salem's next go is on Monday with Lynn afternoon.

Salem displayed scoring ability against Bangor, though the latter was not strong. Salem, however, was tuned up by that game and figured to down Newburyport today by a small score.

Brighton and Hyde Park put on their battle tomorrow afternoon at Fenway. It was thought the game might be shifted to Celtic Park, but the original Fenway billing will be followed.

FEATHERS NO LIGHTWEIGHT

The Bears seem to be a team of superstars [illegible] Red" Grange is still [illegible] member of the club, [illegible] veteran who has written football history in bold letters, but the younger fellers are catching up to and passing him.

There is, for example, young Beattie Feathers, late of Tennessee. New England fans took upon Cliff Battles as the ultra ultra among ball carriers. But the great ground gaining record that Battles set last year has already been surpassed by Feathers, who is a whisper, a shadow, a ghost, and a bullet.

When the boys retired to the drawing room for a cigar a few years back, they talked about Red Grange as the greatest running back the game has ever known. Last fall, Battles easily eclipsed the University of Illinois star. And this Fall, Feathers is setting a dizzy pace.

HEWITT THE NONPAREIL

Do you realize that he has gained some 800 yards this season? Do you happen to know that he has been thrown for the almost unbelievable total of two yards this year?

Do you know that the Giants last Sunday, patted themselves on the back for stopping Feathers because he gained but 45 yards in eight attempts—an average of almost six yards to a rush against the leaders of the Eastern Division?

In addition to Grange and Feathers there are terrific backs like Bronko Nagurski, burly linesmasher; Gene Ronzani, who played here with Marquette University; Carl Brumbaugh of the Bears; Jack Manders and many more.

But I forget to mention Bill Hewitt, the chunky little man who starred for Michigan? Master Hewitt is an end, and the finest end I have ever seen.

He catches passes out of thin air. He blocks viciously. He stands back in the kicker's position, where he is a notable triple threat.

Hewitt can run pass and kick. As a matter of fact, he can play on my football team.

Yannetti to Be in Chelsea Pure Show

Dante Yannetti, graduate of Chelsea High, and one of the most likely looking 147-pound amateurs will be one of the stars to compete in an amateur boxing tournament next Tuesday night.

The tournament, which will be held under the Militarism Social and Athletic Club banner at Congress Hall, 263 Broadway, will be the first held in Chelsea for more than 10 years. Backed by the enthusiasm displayed in Chelsea, Revere, East Boston, Malden, and Everett, it will be a pronounced success.

Open competition will be held in the 118, 126, 147, and heavyweight classes. Entries may be forwarded to William Tiernan, 143 Spencer avenue, Chelsea.

Cowboy Tries Flying Tackle on Steer

The flying tackle when made by a football player is sensational enough in itself but when made by a 6 foot 4 inch, 220 pound cowboy from the back of a flying broncho on to that of a careening steer, it certainly sets the pulses pounding.

This feat will be performed by Hughie Bennett, champion steer wrestler, for the benefit of the Harvard football team, which will be the guests of Col. Johnson at the Rodeo in Boston Garden, tonight.

Bennett played end on Texas Christian College six years ago.

Runyon Lauds Terry for Stand Against Press

By DAMON RUNYON

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service)

New York, Nov. 7—New York sport [illegible] writers last week found themselves [illegible] their hands so to speak.

While a well-known theatrical producer was handing out the dramatic critics, calling them thus-and-sos because they did not like some of his works, Mr. Terry, manager of the Giants was intimating down south that [illegible] does not care for the sports writers.

The writer is somehow reminded of a little story.

One day, years ago, Mr. Jean Willard, former heavyweight champion of the world, said to Mr. Will Farnsworth, then, as now, a great metropolitan sporting editor:

"Mr. Farnsworth, I do not like you."

"Mr. Willard," replied Mr. Farnsworth, "That makes us absolutely even. I have never liked you. I do not like you now."

The writer refrains from adding Mr. Farnsworth's embellishments to the statement Mr. Farnsworth was younger then than he is now. No doubt [illegible] did not like him and savaged with more persiflage.

WILLARD DISLIKED

In the world of sport, perhaps as of drama, there have been many distinguished characters who said they did not care for the writers.

This was always duly reported but the reports invariably neglected to state the feelings of the writers toward the distinguished characters which is just as important. In the case of Mr. Terry and the scribes it is only fair to say that like Mr. Willard and Mr. Farnsworth, everything is absolutely even.

Mr. Willard, in his championship days, was famous for his dislike for the newspaper fraternity. In later years, he recanted, and became quite friendly with the boys. This generally happens as the years flow on, and on.

Take the case of Mr. Gene Tunney when he was champion. He did not like the sport writers. The sport writers did not like Mr. Tunney. Today there is no friendlier, no more companionable soul in all the world of sport than Mr. Tunney.

The writer is inclined to commend Mr. Terry for his frankness. At least a scribe knows where he stands with Mr. Terry right from tap.

Other baseball managers have disliked the writers, but were afraid to say so. They masked their feelings behind a "castor oil" smile when the writers came around, but dropped in the sing behind the writers' backs.

Mr. Terry's is the better way.

The late John J. McGraw, Mr. Terry's predecessor in managing the New York Giants, did not like baseball writers as a class for many [illegible] had the temerity to criticize his ball club, but McGraw treated writers traveling with the club as [illegible] and left a good many kicks with them except now and then.

The writer does not [illegible] Terry has been [illegible] figures in baseball [illegible] writers covering [illegible] The writer does feel [illegible] that the scribes owe him to the making of an able [illegible] degree that puts the figure in their debt.

They certainly cannot take a more frontal attack than Mr. Terry has made. He has [illegible] the manager of the Giants [illegible] but they cannot make him [illegible] great.

A baseball manager, as Mr. Terry is fighting, as Mr. Tunney, as Tilden who did not ask mercy for scribes in his heyday, make themselves by their conduct. The writers cannot ignore them or belittle their successes, because they are a matter of news, and the reading public is interested a little more in performance than personality.

Maine Center Breaks Finger

Orono Me. Nov. 7. Ty Cobb of Maine center will be out of the University of Maine lineup with a broken finger when the [illegible] faces Bowdoin Saturday.

MANLY LOOKS OVER GUARD ASPIRANTS

Joe Palmieri and Francis Cahill are both making strong bids for the vacant guard berth in the Tufts [illegible] line evacuated by Joe Ginley, whose shoulder was broken in last week's clash with the New Hampshire Wildcats.

Coach Lew Manly is taking his [illegible] reeling a permanent man, [illegible] much impressed with [illegible] prep and high [illegible] together [illegible] the Jumbo grid record [illegible]

The loss of Ginley is keenly felt by the entire team, for he had learned the art of playing with [illegible] of the eleven as a unit. [illegible] Palmieri and Cahill have [illegible] experience in [illegible] but neither has seen much [illegible] collegiate service.

With [illegible] change, the Jumbo [illegible] faces Middlebury at [illegible] Saturday is identical with that of last week.

EASTMAN SAYS SACRIFICES ARE NEEDED

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

We discussed the futility of rail road borrowing as a way out of present difficulties in our columns and today I have press wires at hand to supply us with opinions follow up from Birmingham, Alabama where Joseph B. Eastman is to appear before the Trade Extension Commission. Where we have avowed further borrowing Mr. Eastman goes a step farther and says that investors must well begin to recognize the necessity of making sacrifices. As an officer of the Interstate Commerce Commission Mr. Eastman sees a clear path of railroad indebtedness must be liquidated into nonexistence. Whose obligations. Some may be a bleak outlook. But when it is a whole situation and may be better for people to accept a non-interest bearing equity than stand by while the interest forces them into bankruptcy.

Joseph B. Eastman

Railroads and railroad problems are a fetish with the writer. But he honestly believes that they represent so important an economic unit that no one is privileged to ignore their present status. Whatever may be by its repeated attempts to rail matters, has acknowledged that it is true. Strangely enough recent measures proved more of a detriment than any other single act. The pension seems headed for an upset. But investors, while they may rightly say that recent events have borne heavily on them, had better be prepared to make temporary sacrifices for their own ultimate good. They must join hands with labor and seek lower operating costs on a united front.

Wholesale Price Decline Larger During October

The slight downward movement registered in the trend of wholesale prices during the latter part of September showed some accelerated speed during October, with the report of the Dun & Bradstreet Wholesale Commodity Price Index showing a decline of 1.9 per cent from the October 1 figure of $9.4586. The October 1 number, in turn, showed a drop of 0.2 per cent from September 1 when the index reached the peak point for over three and a half years.

The November 1 index, however, at $9.61 per cent above the January 1 level, figure of $8.8230, and 7.5 per cent higher than $8.8480 on November 1, 1933, or a gain of 4.9 per cent. Comparison with the November 1, 1932 number ($6.9638) shows a rise of 37.2 per cent.

Declines in the 96 commodities included in the Index advanced during the past month while 33 registered declines. Changes were particularly noticeable in the breadstuffs, meat, etc., provisions, and textile groups, with the metals and miscellaneous groups showing no net change. Advances were recorded in only three groups, fruits, hides and leather, and naval stores. The remaining groups, coal and coke, building materials, and chemicals and drugs remained unchanged.

Following are the group totals comprising the Dun & Bradstreet Monthly commodity Price Index (the same total of the price per pound of 96 articles in common use) for November 1, 1934, together with comparative figures for the preceding month and year:

Daily Stock Analysis

COMPANY—Public Service of New Jersey. Operates in the state of that name substantial gas and electric properties. Also has extensive interests in traction properties.

CAPITALIZATION — Funded debt, $200,000,000; four classes of preferred totaling 1,607,000 shares, carrying 3, 6, 7 and 8 per cent rates. Common shares outstanding amount to 4,000,000 and earnings has fluctuated since 1929 from a high of $7.74 to a low of 28.

EARNINGS—The percentage of income available for common earnings from gross revenues has been well maintained during the last two years. The current rate is barely being covered. Gross earnings are still high, as compared to value of properties.

DIVIDENDS—All bond interest and preferred stock dividends being paid. Common dividend is currently $2.80 per share annually. At current quotations, return is slightly better than 8 per cent. Some see this return as a danger signal and would not be taken.

COMMENT—The senior obligations of Public Service of New Jersey can hardly be denied a high rating. But with utility rate reductions still holding a prominent place in political favor it is hard to take the optimistic view of the common possible a few years back. Moreover, cuts in rates might be taken as warrant for a lower common dividend.

Brief: Fundamentally the list seems to be in a better position to go ahead than to react . . . We believe it will do just that. The reaction in here will supply the answer . . . If the industrials slide off two or three dollars and hold it will look most promising . . . The 94 level on the 20 industrial index is the test point . . . There is no real need for them to go far under that point and if they do it will look as though some dollar weakness has upset the technical position.

From Moody's Investors Service we learn that 10 per cent of the depression dividend loss has been recovered. The rate of recovery for chemicals and gold miners is best while utilities are losing further ground. The service supplies us with a dividend loss figure for the depression which is the first to come to our attention. Seventeen hundred and twenty-six thousand millions is the dividend shrinkage in annual rates.

In order to facilitate the computation of margins under the regulations of the Security Exchange Act, the Boston Evening American now carries the low since July 1, 1933, instead of the low for the year. The Securities Exchange Act provides that until July 1, 1935, the lowest price at which a security has sold since July, 1933, shall be considered as the lowest market price in the preceding 36 months. After July 1, 1935, the Act provides that this lowest price in the preceding 36 months will form the basis for margin computation.

New York, Nov. 7—With yesterday's election results revealing a New Deal sweep beyond all expectations, the stock market turned strong on inflationary hopes with gains running to 2 points.

The advance which set in around noon broadened out substantially in the final hour with all sections of the list participating, and the ticker fell a minute behind.

FRENCH CRISIS

The serious political situation in France where the Doumergue cabinet crisis was fast coming to a head, and United States Government bonds were further incentives to the market.

United States Steel and Bethlehem were among the strong spots in the list, both moving up about a point.

Utility shares gained as the session wore on, in the face of victories for municipal ownership in various parts of the country. Consolidated Gas, American Water Works and several other issues here were in demand from the opening and scored gains running to a point.

Building shares also were in demand under the leadership of Johns Manville and American Radiator.

BONDS DECLINE

From the moderate decline in gilt-edged bonds, and the buying of non-favored metal stocks, it was apparent that some quarters in Wall Street were endeavoring to interpret the New Deal landslide as inflationary.

This evidently was based on the prominence of the government spending controversy in the pre-election campaigns. In some quarters, however, it was held that until the temper of the new Congress is more definitely known, it will be impossible to determine whether the result of the voting may me inflationary. It is possible, some suggested, that the hand of the administration has been so strengthened that it will be better able to hold in check demands for expenditure of government funds.

Earnings statements attracted some attention. Republic Steel, like Bethlehem and Steel, reported a substantial loss for the third quarter, amounting to $2,998,-000, against a profit of $2,000,000 in the same quarter last year. American Rolling Mill, reported for the entire nine months ended September 30, however, showed net of 80 cents a share, against a sizable deficit last year, and Pullman reported profit of 64 cents a share for the period, compared with a deficit in the like months of 1933.

Corporate news included ordering of regular dividend on A and B a share by Socony-Vacuum, and ordering of the regular quarterly common dividend of $1 by Eastman Kodak.

Dollar Lower at Close in London

London, Nov. 7 (AP)—The United States dollar lost 1 9-16 cents to the pound today, closing at 8.00 to the pound as compared with the opening night rate of 4.98 7-16. The opening was at 5.00¼.

The British pound, which was supported after the banks closed yesterday, continued in demand today because foreign speculators were transferring funds to London owing to the continental political situation.

Gold currencies drooped under the lead of the franc which closed at 75.93 to the pound as compared with yesterday's close of 76.62. The dollar followed the lead of the franc.

Dashiell Hammett in "The Big Knockover" Tells

Police Hope Red's Girl Will Betray Master Mind

Girl's "Loyal Brother" in Clue Hunt

CHAPTER XIV

"You know what'll happen if she learns you're stringing along with me?"

"Uh-huh! She'll chuck a convulsion—kind of balmy on the subject of keeping clear of the police, isn't she?" grinned Tom-Tom.

"She is—somebody told her something about honor among thieves once and she's never got over it. Her brother's doing a hitch up North now—Johnny the Plumber sold him out. Her man Paddy was mowed down by his pals. Did either of those things wake her up? Not a chance. She'd rather be Papadopoulos go free than join forces with us."

"That's all right," Tom-Tom Carey assured me. "She thinks I'm the loyal brother—Paddy couldn't have told her much about me—and I'll handle her. You having her shadowed?"

I said: "Yes—ever since she was turned loose. She was picked up the same day Flora and Pogy and Red grabbed her, but we hadn't anything on her except that she had been Paddy's ladylove, so I had her sprung. How much dope did you get out of her?"

"Descriptions of Papadoodle and Nancy Regan, and that's all. She don't know any more about them than I do. Where does this Regan girl fit in?"

"Hardly any, except that she might lead us to Papadopoulos. She was Red's girl. It was keeping a date with her that sent the game. When Papadopoulos wriggled out he took the girl with him. I don't know why. She wasn't in on the stick-ups."

Tom-Tom Carey finished making and lighting his fifth cigarette and stood up.

"Are we teamed?" he asked as he pocketed up his hat.

"If you turn in Papadopoulos I'll see that you get every nickel you're entitled to," replied. "And I'll give you a clear field—I won't handicap you with too much of an attempt to keep my eyes on your actions."

He said that was fair enough, told me he was stopping at a hotel in Ellis Street and went away.

Calling the late Tavior Newhall's office on the phone, I was told that if I wanted any information about his affairs I should try his country residence, some miles south of San Francisco. I tried it. A ministerial voice that said it belonged to the butler told me that Newhall's attorney, Franklin Ellert, was the person I should see. I went over to Ellert's office.

MAN WITH LISP

He was a nervous, irritable old man with a lisp and eyes that stuck out with blood pressure.

"Is there any reason," I asked point-blank, "for supposing that Newhall's murder was anything more than a Mexican bandit outburst? Is it likely that he was killed purposely, and not resisting capture?"

Lawyers don't like to be questioned. This one sputtered and made faces at me and let his eyes stick out still further and, of course, didn't give me an answer.

"How? How?" he snapped disagreeably. "Exthplain your meaning, thir!"

He glared at me and then at the desk, pushing papers around with excited hands, as if he were hunting for a police whistle. I told my story—told him about Tom-Tom Carey.

Ellert sputtered some more, demanded, "What the devil do you mean?" and made a complete jumble of the papers on his desk.

"I don't mean anything," I growled back. "I'm just telling you what was said."

"Yeth! Yeth! I know!" He stopped glaring at me and his voice was less peevish. "But there ith absholutely no reathon for thuthpecting anything of the thort. None at all, thir, none at all!"

"Maybe you're right," I turned to the door. "But I'll poke into it a little anyway."

"Wait! Wait!" He scrambled out of his chair and ran around the desk to me. "I think you are mithtaken, but if you are going to inveththigate it I would like to know what you dithcover. Perhapth you'd better charge me with your regular fee for whatever ith done, and keep me informed of your progreth. Thatithfactory?"

QUESTIONS ELLERT

I said it was, came back to his desk and began to question him. There was, as the lawyer had said, nothing in Newhall's affairs to stir us up. The dead man was several times a millionaire, with most of his money in mines. He had inherited nearly half his money. There was no shady practice, no claim-jumping, no trickery in his past, no enemies. He was a widower with one daughter. She had everything she wanted while he lived, and she and her father had been very fond of one another. He had gone to Mexico with a party of mining men from New York who expected to sell him some property there. They had been attacked by bandits, had driven them off, but Newhall and a geologist named Parker had been killed during the fight.

Back in the office, I wrote a telegram to our Los Angeles branch, asking that an operative be sent to Nogales to pry into Newhall's killing and Tom-Tom Carey's affairs. The clerk to whom I gave it to coded and sent told me the Old Man wanted to see me. I went into his office and was introduced to a short, rolly-polly man named Hook.

"Mr. Hook," the Old Man said, "is the proprietor of a restaurant in Sausalito. Last Monday he employed a waitress named Nelly Riley. She told him she had come from Los Angeles. Her description, as Mr. Hook gives it, is quite similar to the description you and Counihan have given of Nancy Regan. Isn't it?" he asked the fat man.

"Absolutely. It's exactly what I read in the papers. She's five feet five inches tall, about, a-d medium in size, and she's got blue eyes and brown hair, and she's around twenty-one or two, and she's got looks, and the thing that counts most is she's high-hat as the devil—she don't think nothin's good enough for her. You, when I tried to be a little sociable she told me to keep my 'dirty paws' to myself. And then I found out she didn't know a hardly nothing about Los Angeles, though she claimed to have lived there two or three years. I bet you she's the girl, all right," and he went on talking about how much reward money he ought to get.

CALLS COUNIHAN

"Are you going back there now?" I asked him.

"Pretty soon. I got to stop and see about some dishes. Then I'm going back."

"This girl will be working?"

"Yes."

"Then we'll send a man over with you—one who knows Nancy Regan."

"Hold it till we get out of the rob," I advised him. "It must be tremendous—the eastern point of your collar is bent."

"Up this way," he said, guiding me around a corner. "Hook's lunchroom is on the corner. You can take a look at the girl if you like. She's of the same size and complexion as Nancy Regan, but that is all. She's a tough little job who probably was fired for dropping her chewing gum in the soup the last place she worked."

All right. That let's her out. Now what's on your mind?"

"After I saw her I started back to the ferry. A boat came in while I was still in sight of Hook's. Two men who must have come in on it came up the street. They were Greeks, pretty young. Even though ordinarily I shouldn't have paid much attention to them. But since Papadopoulos is a Greek, we have been interested in them, of course, so I looked at these chaps. They were arguing about something as they walked, not talking loud, but scowling at one another. As they passed me the chap on the gutter side said to the other, 'I tell him it's been twenty-nine days.'

"Twenty-nine days. I counted back and its just twenty-nine days since we started hunting for Papadopoulos. He is a Greek and these chaps were Greeks. When I had finished counting I turned around and began to follow them. They took me all the way through the town and to the ferry landing. They went to a little cottage—it couldn't have more than three rooms—set back a-looking in the woods by itself. There was a 'For Sale' sign on it, and no curtains in the windows to sign of occupancy—but on the ground behind the back door there was a pick-plane, an 8 gallon bucket or pan of water had been thrown out.

HIDDEN IN BUSHES

"I stayed in the bushes until it got a little darker. Then I went closer. I could hear people inside, but I couldn't see anything through the windows. They're boarded up. After a while the two chaps I had followed came out, saying something in a language I couldn't understand as they locked the cottage. The cottage door stayed open until the two men had gone out of sight down the path—so I couldn't have followed them without being seen by whoever was at the door. Then the door was closed and I could hear people moving around inside—or perhaps only one person walking—and smelled cooking, and some smoke came out of the chimney. I waited and waited and nothing more happened and I thought I had better get in touch with you."

"Sounds interesting," I agreed.

We were passing under a street light. Jack stopped me with a hand on my arm and reached something out of his overcoat pocket.

"Look!" He held it out to me. A blurred piece of blue cloth. It could have been the remains of a woman's hat that had been threequarters burned. I looked at it under the street light and then used my flashlight to examine it more closely.

"I picked it up behind the cottage while I was nosing around," Jack said, "and—and my youthful gallantry lead you to a poke in the jaw this time. Pretend you're grown up."

An hour later I walked off the boat in Sausalito. Jack Counihan pushed through the crowd and began talking:

"Coming down here on my way back—"

"This Nelly Riley won't be Nancy Regan," I said. "But we can't afford to pass up even a hundred-to-one chance."

I told Jack and the Old Man about Tom-Tom Carey and my visit to Ellert's office. The Old Man listened with his usual politeattentiveness. Young Counihan—only four months in the man-hunting business—listened with wide eyes.

"You'd better run along now and meet Hook," I said when I had finished, leaving the Old Man's office with Jack. "And if she should be Nancy Regan—grab her and hang on." We were out of the Old Man's hearing, so I added, "And for God's sake don't let your youthful gallantry lead you to a poke in the jaw this time. Pretend you're grown up."

An hour later I walked off the boat in Sausalito. Jack Counihan pushed through the crowd and began talking:

"Coming down here on my way back—"

DANDERINE insures your hair for a penny a day

When you pay a dollar for a wave, Danderine will help you keep it. It isn't a sticky dressing, or an oily tonic, and it doesn't leave a telltale odor. Its fresh fragrance goes so quickly after applying, but not that marvelous effect of freshness and cleanliness!

When you've washed your hair, a little Danderine will keep it from going helter-skelter.

Use a dash of Danderine every day—every time you comb your hair—to be sure of your hair all day long! To know it's clean, and looks clean. To know it will stay as you arranged it. And to know there is no ugly dandruff.

That's what moistening your comb with a few drops of Danderine will do. And no amount of dry combing will ever do. Nearly all hair needs the help that Danderine gives it. A dash of Danderine morning and night makes an amazing difference in the way any hair looks all the time! It doesn't affect the color, either.

With all the care you give your hair, it's a pity to omit this last touch that means so much. It's no trouble! Yet you can hardly believe anything so mild and pleasant as Danderine could bring such a change in the condition and appearance of your hair and scalp. Just try it. You can buy Danderine at any drugstore for thirty-five cents; larger sizes, 60c and $1.00.

MARY PICKFORD IN A DRAMA TONIGHT

Mary Pickford, the one time screen star now aspiring to radioland Hall of Fame heights and making the grade in many loudspeaker patron circles, has chosen the well known A. A. Milne drama, "Michael and Mary," with which to take her "mike" turn with her talented round of stanntum stock company tonight (WEEI) at 8 o'clock.

This particular play is not an old opus by any manner of means. It first found favor on Broadway in 1929. The whimsical English setting and theme in due time made "Michael and Mary" one of the most talked-of stage presentations in many years.

Howard Barlow and his orchestra supply the musical background during such selections as "The Song to You" and "Music in the Air" by the ensemble. Miss Eastman contributes the "Kashmiri Song," followed by the colorful "Eastern Romance" composition by Rimsky-Korsakoff,

"And Nancy Regan wore a hat of that shade the night she and Papadopoulos vanished," I finished for him. "Go to the cottage."

We left the street lights behind, climbed the hill, dipped down into a little valley, turned into a winding sandy path, left that to cut across sod between trees to a dirt road, took half mile of that, and then Jack led the way along a narrow path that wound through a black tangle of bushes and small trees. I hoped he knew where he was going.

"Almost there," he whispered to me.

A man jumped out of the bushes and took me by the neck.

succeeds in working his way back to wages and employment, almost as if he were Shaw's inspired millionaire in "Major Barbara."

They are insistent, for instance, that our present crime condition is primarily due to unemployment and a muddled economic system. They refuse to take into consideration the hundreds of thousands of the unemployed and very poor who are living irreproachable lives.

They refuse to take into consideration what the early church very sensibly called "original sin" or the fact that some people are born with spiritual or mental twists which no education nor environment can untwist.

They would like to count all criminals from the "underprivileged" classes of the city slum, regardless of the fact that many of our most notorious public enemies derive from the much-vaunted old American stock of the farming class, usually in the "Bible belt."

They brush these facts aside and go back to the economic determinism as a cause of everything.

As I say, I do not believe in it. That is why I can always a little dubious about the value of the Forum. A Forum, in the last analysis, is a place where people with closed minds full of preconceived idea go to quarrel with anyone who seeks to bring them a different point of view.

The only result is to harden their hearts and hermetically seal their minds still further. They will have none of the unknown quantities of human behavior in their formulas which they confidently believe to be scientific.

And that is why they are always being disappointed when human nature en mass proceeds to act, as it acted yesterday, in terms of its quite natural and to-be-expected feelings about things.

Fred Allen and James Melton on "Town Hall" Program

Fred Allen announces that his musical menu for the weekly "Town Hall tonight" 60 minutes (WEEI) beginning at 9 this evening, consists of "Carry Me Back to the Lone Prairie" and "Lindy Lou," to be sung by James Melton, tenor. Ensemble vocals in addition to the Melton solos are to be "The World Is Mine" and "If You Could Only Come With Me," which pair of pieces happen to be two favorites of Fred Allen himself. He apparently likes the ballad bits so well that he even forgets to make mention of how he would accomplish the comedy ends. Maybe the sentimental side of the comedian will come out for an airing, although Fred would be likely to be extremely funny while striving to be profoundly serious.

NEW ENGLAND'S GREATEST EVENING NEWSPAPER

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1934

LARGEST EVENING CIRCULATION BY MORE THAN 80,000

Congratulations to Our New Governor on His Victory!

CONGRATULATIONS, Governor-Elect James M. Curley!

By the mandate of a majority of the people, as expressed at the polls, you are to contribute your great ability to ALL the Commonwealth for the next two years.

It has been a long, hard fight. Starting even before the pre-primary convention at Worcester committed the blunder that might have cost your party success.

You have the sound satisfaction of having conducted a CLEAN campaign.

Yours is also the satisfaction of having WON ON MERIT.

Your record was an open book. Its text was in plain language that the COMMON PEOPLE could read and understand.

They appreciated the upbuilding way in which you handled affairs during your terms as Mayor of Boston.

THEY wanted to see these same methods brought to Beacon Hill.

So they voted for you. And so you were elected.

We believe you will give Massachusetts gubernatorial services of a calibre seldom, if ever, equaled in the history of the old Bay State.

In the course of the campaign you have outlined, from time to time, constructive measures.

They were based on common sense, as all really constructive plans must be.

During the next two years, you will be afforded ample time to do BIG THINGS for Massachusetts.

All who know your great ability, all who have studied your past record, believe that you will do Big Things.

Dinners for Needy

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."—Matthew vii, 12.

With the approach of the Christmas season it is more than appropriate that this Bible quotation with which all are familiar should have prominent place in the hearts and thoughts of the generous.

For this is the season, which more than any other during the year, impresses on the poor and needy the seeming hopelessness of their position. The bitter pangs of want are made more acute by the sight of those enjoying the most humble things for which they hunger.

It is to ease their burden and pain to some extent that the Boston Evening American yearly establishes a Christmas Basket Fund. Throughout the year boxing and wrestling contests contribute their part. Various entertainments are given through the fall and winter months.

From all these the Boston Evening American receives not ONE CENT of profit. If you find it impossible to attend at any time send a cash gift to the Christmas Basket Editor. Do it NOW. Imagine yourself in the position of those facing a dinnerless Christmas.

"Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

Open School Week

"Open School Week" is here again.

Superintendent Patrick Campbell has invited "the community" to visit Boston's good schools and see for itself what teachers and pupils are doing.

In addition, principals and instructors are extending individual invitations to parents.

Everybody ought to accept the invitation.

The schools are more important than any other public service in America.

And the school authorities have been wise in establishing "Open School Week."

The best possible way to "regiment" support for education is to dramatize education to the community as a continuing and vital part of its daily life.

Safeguard the Dollars

The success of snatch thieves in obtaining a bag containing several hundreds of dollars from a woman cashier in the Back Bay this week is apt to encourage others.

This is unfortunate. It is also unfortunate that so many payrolls are loosely guarded and that money is carried around as carelessly as it often is.

If you have charge of a payroll that in the past has been handled without due precaution, turn over a new leaf. See that it is protected.

If you have been carrying around considerable sums on your person, make up your mind to use a bank for safety's sake. Don't encourage crime.

Rum and Radio

Radio waves, according to doctors attending the annual meeting of the Academy of Physical Medicine, in New York, can be used to relieve the "morning-after" craving for another drink. The waves warm the walls of the stomach, causing tension to disappear.

Science is wonderful, but it will be even more wonderful if it can make the "morning-after" head return to its normal size as simply.

She Speaks for Those Who Drudge in Dreary Places

Elsie Robinson

They're giving her a great hand all over America today—this twenty-four-year-old youngster who has written an amazing record of our earth and those who toil upon it.

Never has any women of our blood drawn such a picture of desperate margin and margin lives as Josephine Johnson has given in her "Now in November." (Simon and Schuster, publishers.)

And some will be exclaiming over the beauty of the simple words in many a picture or the depth of her philosophy . . . and some at the cleverness of her technique.

But there will be a vast chorus whom most of us will never hear. And they, I'm thinking, will be feeling a gratitude and relief—for all their stumbling tongues—that will make the most brilliant critic's praise seem cold.

BOOK THAT'S NEEDED

For here at last is a book for those who cannot make books for themselves . . . nor reveal their own truth . . . nor uncover their own terror. Here is a book for those ahead of those who drudge in dreary places—and God knows they need it!

Endless books there are about the soil—strong, grim books, rich, melodious books—but never a book for those ahead of those who drudge in dreary places—and God knows they need it!

Endless books there are about the soil—strong, grim books, rich, melodious books—but never a book for those ahead of those who drudge in dreary places—and God knows they need it!

For we've had quite enough of turning perspiration into art. It's needful now that we know what our carrots really cost—what it takes, in sweat and tears, withering flesh and clotting blood, to feed America. And this girl tells us just that.

There are passages so lovely they will make your heart sing like a harp. But you can have them. As for me—having been a dirt farmer myself—I'm taking those others—those harsh, simple lines, stripped of all prettiness, bared down to the very bones and tendons of courage and despair. Listen. Here is how she speaks of that earth to which she came as a child—not as a picture, not as a poem, but as earth really is—

"Something both treacherous and kind, which could be trusted only to be inconstant, and would go its own way as though we were never born."

The callous, complacent, implacable earth—how little city dwellers know of it, snoozing over their silly window boxes, scoffing at the farmers' plea for aid!

And then again the picture of mortgaged soil — mortgaged souls —

"The debt was still like a bottomless swamp, unfilled, where we had gone year after year, throwing in hours of heat and the wrenching on stony land, only to see them swallowed up and then to creep back and begin again."

The grim, gray cycle of hope and despair—year after year—

"The hope worn on indefinitely . . . the desire never fulfilled . . . four o'clock and the leaden gray morning . . . the cows and dark . . . the cans enormous in the foggy lamplight . . . day come up cold and windy . . . Max sullen as a red cloud . . . the endless creaking . . . the sour rims of galls . . . Father's gray shirts soaking all day in water . . . There seemed no answer, and the answer lay only in forgetting."

What has it cost to make America? What do we owe to those who toil forgotten—margin lives on margin lands? That's what it costs.

That's what we owe. And every American, from Cape Cod to the Golden Gate, should be grateful to you for telling us, Josephine, child.

Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

BUT WERE WE STODGY

There are probably very few people living who can recall that gloomy, gruesome period of horse-hair furniture, hand-painted plaques and Victorian morals, known as the silk-plush age—the Age of Stuffiness.

Helen Rowland

But there are lots of us who DO remember, with tenderness and regret, a calmer, sweeter, less tempestuous time than this—a time before the world turned topsy-turvy and went quite mad!

The Beautiful Age of Tranquility, before we had ever heard of machine guns, facial surgery, racketeering, movie censorship, birth control, acidosis, or the alimony jail.

When kidnapings were so rare and unusual that people still talked of "Charlie Ross" in shocked tones, even though "Charlie" must have been fifty.

MEN WONDERED

When a man still wondered how a woman's clothes were made, and suspected that she had been born with them on. He had never seen her collecting a sun-tan on her vertebrae.

When a girl's entire wardrobe consisted of a tailored suit, one best dress and an evening gown; and white gloves were worn only for special occasions.

When NO girl would "waste her time" on a married man but bachelors were petted, dined, flattered, and spoiled by ALL women.

When most of the petting came AFTER the engagement—and a man felt that he had to know you at least a few hours before starting the campaign.

When a girl's goodnight kiss was regarded as a privilege or a favor and not just a matter of quid pro quo, in return for a night club picture or a few drinks at a roadhouse.

When debutantes were considered sweet—but "intelpid"—and widows were the caviar and wine of a man's romantic life.

IN OLD DAYS

When most of the useful things were marked "Made in Germany" and most of the beautiful things were marked "Made in France"—and we actually believed that they WERE made there, instead of in Japan or Connecticut or Grand Rapids.

When authors asked passionately "Is marriage a failure?" instead of casually assuming that it is just an obsolete custom, like hat-tipping and or handkissing or carrying an umbrella.

When virtue was virtue, sin was sin—and a married man was a married man. And there were no psychoanalysts to get you confused about it.

When a woman could grow fat and a man could grow bald and middle-aged peacefully and comfortably, and it was no disgrace.

The pleasant, charming, easy-going Age of Tranquility—before wars, prohibition, "prosperity," gangsters, show-offs, jazz, night clubs, brittle engagements, sex-books and part-time marriages turned the world upside-down! Wonder if we'll ever be tranquil, again. Or was it just stodgy?

The School Teacher

By Winifred Black

"GOODBY MR. CHIPS."

Have you read it? No?

Well, step right into the first bookstore you can find or call up your own special circulating library and ask to have it saved for you.

You'll have to speak up about it—I had to wait three days to get hold of a copy.

People told me it was a scream. They said it would make me laugh, more than I had laughed for years.

Winifred Black

Now, if there is one thing I love to do, it is to laugh. So when we finally did get hold of the book, we sat down with our faces stretched in a grin of anticipation —they didn't stay that way long.

"Goodby Mr. Chips" is not funny at all. It is charming, delightful, a little whimsical, a little sad, and not in the least funny.

But what a delight it was to read it.

No villains, no vamps, no hidden horrors, no spite and envy in the way of biography—not much romance, either. Just a simple story of a nice old man, and his pleasant, kindly, human way of life in a great boys' school, somewhere near the fens in England.

You start with the master on his first evening at the school, when he was so nervous that he could hardly face the great hall full of grinning, mischievous, critical half grown boys.

And you follow him through the years—there's a beautiful young wife for a year or so, and then she's gone, she and the child who went out of the world with her.

There are school fights and school politics and tea—oh, no end of tea, with thin bread and butter and the pound cake that is England's glory and her shame.

Parents, head masters, morning on the downs, evenings in the long English twilight, books, a bright fire on a plain little hearth.

The good old landlady who was once in charge of the linen at the school, and then suddenly without warning at all married and "settled down," and in her cheerful widowhood made a comfortable and highly respectable home for dear old Mr. Chips, while England went through the Boer war, and the Jameson raid, and the World war, and Mr. Chips' boys marched away to France and some of them came home again and some did not.

"SUNSET AND EVENING STAR"

But Mr. Chips never forgot one of them. He remembered how the cabinet minister looked when his hair was red, and how the great general misbehaved in class and could never learn even Amo Amas like the rest.

Nothing thrilling, nothing romantic, nothing specially tragic or especially glorious about this little book, but somehow it made you feel as if you sat somewhere with an old friend and smiled together at the memory of some of the oddities of those you knew and loved when you were young enough and kind enough and hopeful enough to believe in people.

"Sunset and evening star." What a joy to find them once again between the covers of a modern best seller.

Stars and Stripes

After hearing Insull tell what a model boy he was, we almost want to give him time off for good behavior while young.

Owing to the high price of milk, many of our public school children are barely able to make Grade B.

Take it from Henry Ford, all that is needed in the automobile business is horse sense.

Oklahoma is hunting a "machine-gun moll." She's probably the one they used to call "Bertha, the Beautiful Sewing-Machine Girl."

Maine held its election first, but got its federal relief last. That's the way in elections and relief—first come, last served.

During all this religious hubbub in Germany we notice that Hitler is keeping as quiet as a church mouse.

Human Side of the News; Cowboys and Rodeos

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Some of those quaint and charming old cowboy songs were written by Jim Welsh, a shrewd Scotch businessman, who used to herd cows in West Texas on a bicycle. One of the best, a long, wailing recitation, told how an angry long-horn steer whammed into his bike and tossed it clear over into the next county, rider and all.

Jim became head cattle buyer for Tex Rickard down in Paraguay. He can bulldog the buffalo on a nickel, but he's about as much of a buckaroo as Charles Evans Hughes. At the rodeo at Madison Square Garden, Mike Hastings of Spoffard, Tex., throws a steer with a front Nelson half-lock in eight and one-fifth seconds.

WORLD'S RECORD

The world's record is five seconds. Back in the roping days, before they started bulldogging—leaping from a horse to the steer—one minute and 20 seconds for lassoing and tying a steer was about the best performance.

Pallid city crowds cheer the bronzed vaqueros. Paul D. Coze, famous French artist, rushes over to paint them, for the fifth year. They are figures of high romance.

"But," say the cowboys, "there ain't any West any more."

They're partly right. Many of the 150 or 200 rodeo cowboys are graduates of dude ranches. There is a National Association of Dude Ranches which seems to have taken in custody the romance of cowpunching. The cowboy's outfit has been built up until it costs about $1200. In the old days, about a month's pay used to rig a working cowboy with hat, chaps, boots, spurs and a bandana handkerchief.

The older timer may have known "The Chisholm Trail." "Bury Me Not on the Lone Prairee." "Root, Hog or Die" and one or two others; but a whole lot of the present repertoire has come along with the dude ranches, the radio and the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers.

The Dossier side of cowpunching is primarily show business. The cattle raisers down in the Texas Panhandle, in the Uvalde country or the plains of New Mexico don't bother about the romance, and they never asked a cowboy if he can sing.

PASSING OF RANGE

The passing of the range, narrower margins of profit, uncertainty of prices have made it a close-figuring business. A cowboy used to get $30 or $60 a month, a few years ago, but now he's down to $25 or $30, as in the nineties, along with his beans and chile, of course.

A romantically inclined young man takes a look at this and heads for either Hollywood or a dude ranch.

A successful New York lawyer, who used to be a regular journeyman cowboy around Laramie, Wyo., 35 years ago, and who used to ride in the annual Frontier Day Celebration at Cheyenne, was chatting at a New York club the other night about cowboys as he knew them. He had just been to the rodeo.

"They're better riders than we were—dude ranches or no dude ranches," he said. "Once in a while we'd hear of some daredevil diving off a horse onto a steer, but our contests were in roping, tying and possibly branding a steer; in roping, blindfolding, saddling and mounting a cayuse, and in riding, bucking and pitching horses, much as these boys do.

"I used to think I was a pretty good cow hand, but these lads take chances I would never have thought of taking. Our stuff, though, was regular range practice, and not circus stuff. Every Sunday afternoon we used to have a big work-out.

"All our stunts were part of the day's work, except, of course, such business as riding a steer. Sometimes we'd put on a surcingle and hold onto it. There are few men who can stick to a rampageous steer without it.

IN OLD DAYS

"We used to whoop and yell a lot, take pot shots at coyotes and likker up on occasion, but I never saw gun-play. There was one chap with black whiskers who was supposed to have about eight notches on his gun, and I was plenty scared of him. One night, as I lay under my tarpaulin in the moonlight, I saw him creeping over toward me. He was a husky citizen, and I knew I wouldn't have a chance with him. I was stiff with fear. Then he leaned over and began talking gently. He was a Hunkard preacher, trying to convert me.

"There must have been about a thousand verses of 'The Chisholm Trail.' We used to sing them endlessly. But some of the boys liked to sing hymns, too, and you would be quite as apt to hear 'Rock of Ages,' as anything else. A new lot of these new cowboy songs sound synthetic to me. The ones that used to get around most were mournful doggerel and usually hard luck stories. One we liked particularly was 'Cole Younger':

'I am one of a band of outlaws;
Cole Youger is my name.
'My crimes and misdemeanors have brought me friends to shame.
'The robbery of the Northfield bank, the same I can't deny:
'And now I am a prisoner;
in the Northfield jail I lie.'

"Eddie Braunschweiger, a tall thin, melancholy cowboy with a German accent, used to sing that one. One half of his face was paralyzed—a perfect dead pan—and with the other half of his face he would cry as he sang out of one side of his mouth, with tears rolling from his off-eye. Eddie was scared of guns, and the boys used to rib him a lot with fake gun-play. But at that, he was the only one of the lot who could get a half-Nelson on a steer, the way these rodeo boys do.

SONG OF PAST YEARS

"We all knew a lot of 'Root Hog, or Die.' Sidney Porter took his name from one of these verses. I don't know just which one it was, but I remember a few of the lines:

"'Along came my true love about 12 o'clock,
Saying Henry, O, Henry! What
Sentence have you got?
The jury found me guilty, the judge allowed no stay;
So they sent me down to Huntsville, for me to wear my life away!'

"When I think of our diet, I wonder how any of us lived to be more than 25—sow belly and hardtack and mighty little green stuff. But there are a few old timers who had lived on just such stuff all their lives. Old Reese Alsbury died at 96, died three years ago at the age of 101, only a week or so out of the saddle. Old Bill Hanger of Montana is still riding hard at 86.

"Even in my day those dumb-looking, peaceable, white-faced Herefords were replacing the long-horns. From that day on they could just as well get a lot of vacationing Vassar girls for cowpunchers, and leave the old buckaroo stuff to the circus business."

To Stop Fires at Sea

THE Morro Castle is a tragic memory, but to neglect its lessons would be an even greater tragedy than the disaster itself.

We therefore welcome the opportunity to publish this letter from Percy C. Spence, New York's Chief of the Division of Fire Prevention in Manhattan, calling attention to several steps that must be taken on American passenger liners if future holocausts are to be averted.

Mr. Spence writes:

"Ships hereafter should be, if not fireproof, constructed of incombustible materials, and where such construction is not practicable, the combustible areas should be so restricted and protected by sprinklers that the hazards would be reduced to a minimum by erecting cut-offs.

"Nitrate film, chemicals, drugs, combustible as well as inflammable mixtures on board ship need proper protection.

"The drapes and hangings should be flame proofed in a manner similar to the treatment of the scenery in a theater.

"Ships now in service could be made more fire-resisting at comparatively little expense. By means of a fire brigade properly organized and drilled, the safety of passengers could be assured in the event of accident.

"Fire-fighting equipment, such as standpipes, extinguishers and fire-extinguishing systems now on board should be under the fire guardians' meticulous care.

"The fire guardians should be experienced in fire prevention methods and have training to fit them particularly for this service.

"The safeguarding of ships from fire at sea is not an impossible task, and there are fire prevention experts well able to maintain safety on vessels UNDER ALL CONDITIONS."

Mr. Spence also points out that, since New York's Triangle fire in 1911, loss of life from fire in factories has been almost entirely ended by applying such elementary fire prevention principles as these.

President Roosevelt himself made similar suggestions after the Morro Castle fire.

There can be no question that if they are carried out, and if standards for officers and crews are raised by requiring naval supervision and training, there will be no more such shameful chapters in American history as that of the Morro Castle.

But it rests with Congress to carry them out, and public opinion certainly should force that body, when it assembles next January, to put them FIRST ON ITS CALENDAR.
